1987-88 Carolina Basketball Outlook

North Carolina heads into the 1987-88 basketball season with Coach Dean Smith's youngest and most inexperienced squad ever. However, the Tar Heels still have the talent to develop into a good college team and be a contender in the Atlantic Coast Conference race.

But, much work must be done and improvement made if Carolina is to approach the level of play of recent Tar Heel teams.

Carolina has finished in the top 10 of the national wire service polls for seven consecutive seasons, reaching the Final 16 of the NCAA Tournament each year. No other school in the nation has accomplished either of those feats. The Tar Heels were 32-4 last season, posted a rare 14-0 unbeaten record in ACC play and were ranked second and third in the final polls.

However, that team featured five seniors, four of whom were among Carolina's top six players—guards Kenny Smith and Curtis Hunter and forwards Joe Wolf and Dave Popson. All four were chosen in the NBA draft. Smith was a unanimous first team All-America and Wolf won All-ACC honors.

"We've certainly lost some great people who will be difficult to replace, both as players and as leaders," says Coach Smith. "This leaves us with a very young team in that we only have one senior and two juniors.

"We have two players, Jeff Lebo and J.R. Reid, who have experience. They have proven they can play well at this level, but we will still need improvement from each of them. The key to our team will be filling our next five or six positions."

Lebo, a 6-3 junior from Carlisle, Pa., teamed with Kenny Smith to form an outstanding backcourt last year. He averaged 13.5 points and 4.2 assists, shooting 53.2 from the field and 84.9 percent from the foul line.

"I don't see a lot of help behind Reid and Williams if they get in foul trouble or give a tired signal. We were going to try to play Chilcutt some at small forward. But, he's the third biggest guy in the program so he will have to stay at the power forward and center spots."

No regular guard in the ACC had better shooting percentages last year and no returning backcourt player in the league had a higher scoring average.

Following last season, he was selected for the U.S. Pan American Games Team.

Although Lebo will again play some at the big guard spot he handled last year, he will likely open the new season at Kenny Smith's old point guard position.

"The two positions are different, but Jeff is smart enough to play either," says Coach Smith. "He picks up things very quickly. I'm confident he will do a fine job at the point for us."

Reid, a 6-9, 256-pound sophomore from Virginia Beach, Va., won ACC Rookie-of-the-Year honors last season after averaging 14.7 points, shooting 58.4 percent from the floor and grabbing 7.4 rebounds a game. However, the upcoming season figures to be even more challenging than his freshman year.

"When you don't have a lot of experience you always worry about defense and rebounding. I've never worried about our offense. The way we play, we're going to get good shots."

"J.R. will find defenses geared toward him much, much more than last season," says Smith. "Opposing teams couldn't afford to put their best defensive players on him or spend too much time trying to stop him last year because we also had Wolf and Popson inside and two outside threats in Kenny and Jeff.

"We also need J.R. to assume more of the rebounding load and improve defensively."

Best bet to start opposite Reid at Carolina's other post position is Scott Williams, a 6-10, 225-pound sophomore from Hacienda Heights, Calif.

As Carolina's most experienced returning inside player, 6-9, 256-pound sophomore J.R. Reid will be counted on as a powerful force in the interior for UNC in the coming season. (Photo by Allen Dean Steele)

Williams made good improvement throughout his freshman season last year. A capable scorer, he will also be counted on for rebounding and shot blocking this year.

"Scott has fine talent," says Smith, "but needs more experience and improved techniques in many areas of play. I'm pleased with his progress to date and hope he will continue to improve."

A major concern is a lack of depth at the post positions. Marty Hensley, a 6-10 sophomore who saw some action last year, is out for the season with a chronic knee problem. That leaves Pete Chilcutt as the only other player with the size needed to handle one of those spots.

A 6-9, 225-pound red-shirt freshman from Eutaw, Ala., Chilcutt is young and obviously inexperienced. Although he struggled in Olympic Festival competition last summer, coaches are hoping he will come on before the end of the year.

The candidates at small forward are Steve Bucknall, Kevin Madden and Rick Fox.

Bucknall, a 6-6, 215-pound junior from London, England, is a fine defensive player who saw some action last year.

"Steve has become a good defensive player and is also a fine rebounder," says Smith. "If he can come on offensively, he could really help us."

Madden is a 6-5, 222-pound sophomore from Staunton, Va., who sat out last season to concentrate on his studies. He got considerable playing time two years ago, averaging 4.9 points and 1.8 rebounds.

"After every loss we've had in the last two years, there has been a celebration by the other team at mid-court. This year we may be doing some of that celebrating."

"I expect Kevin to play much better than he did as a freshman," says Smith. "He must if we are to be a contender in the ACC. In the last year Kevin has done very well academically. He's got pride in his work and I'm hoping that will carry over to the court."

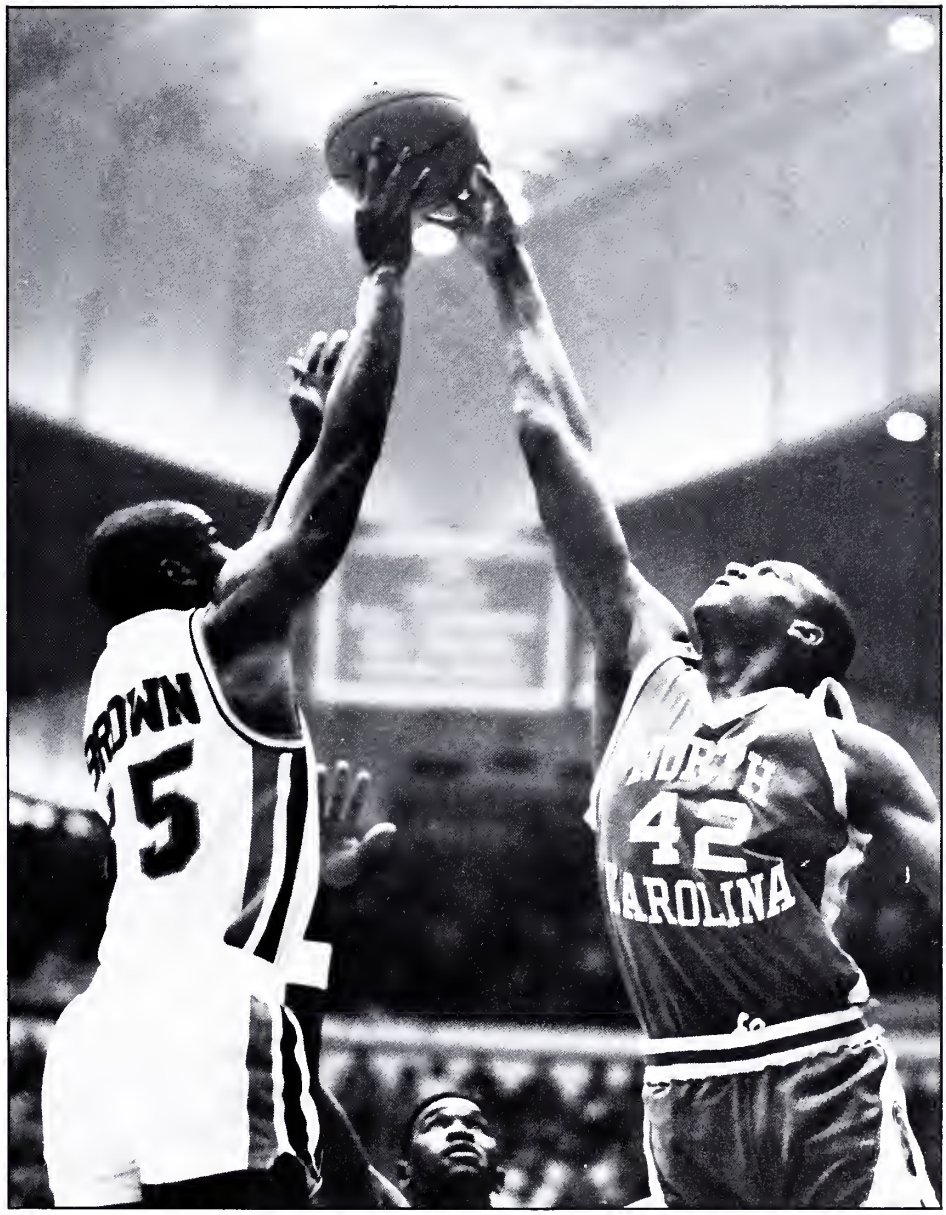
Fox, a 6-7, 221-pound freshman from Nassau, Bahamas, could be used at big forward as well as small forward. However, the positions are different and it will be difficult for a freshman to learn both. Eventually, Fox might even be a big guard.

Leading contender for the spot opposite Lebo in the backcourt is 6-1 Ranzino Smith of Chapel Hill, the team's only senior. A good outside shooter, Smith needs to overcome his lack of height to become a better defender and rebounder.

In addition, as Carolina's lone senior, Smith will also be counted on heavily to fill a leadership role.

Other possibilities at big guard are

"Our freshmen have played in the past. I don't think anyone has started as many freshmen as we have on Top 10-type teams. I don't know about these particular freshmen starting, but I think they will both contribute."



Sophomore post player Scott Williams tied for the team leadership in blocked shots last season and will be looked to for improvement in all areas of the game in 1987-88.

Madden, Lebo and 6-3 Jeff Denny. Denny, a sophomore from Rural Hall, N.C., is a good shooter who needs to improve in other areas of play.

Backup help for Lebo at point guard will come from King Rice, a 6-0 freshman from Binghamton, N.Y. and 5-8 walk-on Rodney Hyatt, a sophomore from Wadesboro, N.C.

"Offensively, we will depend on the fast break as we always have," says Coach Smith. "We won't be as quick changing ends of the court without Kenny's ability to push the ball up, but we will run whenever we can. We hope to have a balanced attack as we did last year (when all five starters averaged in double figures).

"When you lack experience it usually shows more defensively than offensively and we will have to work to become a good defensive team. Rebounding is the key to any season, so that's a concern. We've lost Wolf, who was our best rebounder last year until we moved him outside the latter part of the season."

Another concern is a typically rugged schedule. The Tar Heels play away from home against all seven ACC opponents as well as Syracuse, Vanderbilt, Southern California, Illinois, UCLA and Nevada-Reno. In addition, there are non-conference home games against NIT semifinalist LaSalle, SMU, Stetson and Temple, the nation's eighth-ranked team last season.

"I think we will be an ACC contender," says Smith, "although we may be picked behind Duke, N.C. State and Georgia Tech in the pre-season polls. I hope that by February we will be a very good team. Going on the road early against the non-conference people we must face has to help us get ready for ACC play."

"The ACC will be very balanced. But, there is balance throughout college basketball. There are good teams everywhere. I think it's extremely difficult to say that one league is better than another."

UNC junior Steve Bucknall has been a defensive standout in his first two seasons at Carolina, but he looks to improve his play on the offensive end in the coming campaign. (Photo by Jim Hawkins)

Possesses excellent quickness... Needs to improve his rebounding and defense... Did an outstanding job in the team's pre-season running program... Named on 135 of 140 ballots as Atlantic Coast Conference Rookie-of-the-Year last season... Joined Jordan and Sam Perkins as only Tar Heels to win that award... A second team All-ACC selection who missed the first team by just one point in the voting... Also a second team All-ACC Tournament selection... Tied for the team lead with 27 blocked shots... The 528 points were the second-most ever scored by a Carolina freshman, trailing a 550 total by Perkins... State and at home against Clemson... Had one four-game stretch when he was 35 of 40 from the field, going 13 of 14 against N.C. State, six of seven at Wake Forest, eight of nine against Georgia Tech and eight of 10 at Clemson... Played a major role in Carolina's success last year as a frontcourt reserve... Really came on strong at the end of the season... Will be counted on even more this year because of the loss of Joe Wolf and Dave Popson... Leading candidate for a starting berth... A good shot blocker... Has a nice shooting touch... Needs to imporve his rebounding and endurance... Played in all 36 games as a freshman... Scored 199 points for a 5.5 average... Shot 49.7 percent from the field (78-157) and 55.8 percent at the free throw line (43-77)... Grabbed 150 rebounds for a 4.2 average... Tied for the team lead with 27 blocked shots... Made perhaps his biggest play of the season in the pressure-packed Atlantic Coast Conference Tournament... With Carolina trailing Virginia in overtime of the semifinals, he hit a right baseline hook shot at the buzzer to tie the game at 78... Tar Heels went on to win in double overtime, 84-82... Actually in his second year at Carolina... Missed most of pre-season practice with an injury last fall... After discussions with the coaching staff, he decided to sit out the year because he was so far behind the other players... Thus, he still has four years of eligibility remaining... Did practice with the team last season until breaking a finger in late January... Missed the rest of practice... So, he really has not had a lot of work... However, being counted on heavily as a major contributor this year... Should be a key reserve in the frontcourt... Has a nice shooting touch for a big man... Very good passer... Needs to work defensively and as a rebounder... Played in the Olympic Festival here last summer... Has a good sense of humor... Played for Coach Scott Brenizer at Tuscaloosa Academy.

Chancellor Christopher Fordham, III

Since Dr. Christopher C. Fordham, III became chancellor in 1980, the University of North Carolina at Chapel Hill increasingly has been recognized as one of the top academic, research and public service institutions in the United States and one of the leading universities in the world.

As its sixth chancellor, Fordham has not been content to allow UNC to rest on past laurels. He has built on those honors, guiding the school into new areas critical to the nation's future.

With Fordham at the helm, UNC has renewed its long time partnership with the state's public schools. More than 20 joint programs have been established to improve teacher education, postgraduate teacher training and student experiences in Tar Heel public school systems.

Examples include the Lyndhurst Fellowship Program, which draws some of the nation's brightest recent college graduates into the teaching profession through a one-year program; the Center for Mathematics and Science Education, aimed at increasing the supply of qualified secondary school math and science teachers; the Mellon-Babcock Reynolds Program, a series of workshops and one-year learning leaves for writing and foreign language teachers from public high schools; and the Principals Executive Institute, a management training course for school principals and superintendents through the Institute of Government.

The University's renewed interest in the well-being of the public schools has had a significant effect upon the morale and public image of the schools, Fordham says. That effort came at a time when many major universities across the nation were cutting back their teacher training programs.

Besides progress with the public schools, the University has had many other accomplishments under Fordham's leadership.

The University consistently has been ranked among the top 20 in the nation in several national surveys of colleges and universities.

The quality of faculty and administrative staff also have been improved, and five vice chancellors and six deans have been appointed.

Funding in several areas has increased. Funding for research topped the $100 million mark for the first time in the school's history in 1986-87, and increased 11 percent over the previous year. In addition, funding from the National Institutes of Health rose 10 percent in 1986—the largest increase for any school on the agency's top 20 list. In its best showing ever, UNC moved to 16th in the agency's list of grantees and became the top-ranking institution in the Southeast. Alumni, friends and students also have supported Carolina at record levels. The amount of private funding for the University increased to more than $36 million last year from $24.9 million for 1985-86. The last four senior classes have set new national records for class gifts.

The appearance of the campus also has changed during Fordham's tenure. New buildings constructed include the Dean E. Smith Center, the William R. Kenan, Jr.

Center (home of the Frank Hawkins Kenan Institute of Private Enterprise), J. Carlyle Sitterson Hall, John Motley Morehead Undergraduate Chemistry Laboratory, Frank Borden and Barbara Lasater Hanes Art Center and the Walter Royal Davis Library.

Those most recent accomplishments are just the latest indication that the University continues its momentum as one of the nation's most prestigious research institutions.

At the same time, Fordham has proven to be an effective and articulate spokesman of the University's mission and its values.

Says William M. Cochrane, president-elect of the General Alumni Association, "Chris Fordham can tell the University story much better than anyone I know. Alderman had the gift to express the spirit of the place. So did Frank Porter Graham and Edward Kidder Graham. They all are key figures in the history of the University."

Fordham has used that gift often. It's just one reason he has been successful in molding an effective team representing the wide variety of special University groups—alumni, students, faculty, staff, administrators and trustees.

But Fordham's influence goes beyond UNC. He was a founding member of the board of directors of the Microelectronics Center of North Carolina, and holds other memberships and committee appointments in professional organizations, including the governing council of the National Academy of Sciences' Institute of Medicine.

He is past chairman of the American Association of American Medical Colleges (AAMC) and the National Council of Deans and Southern Regional Deans. He also is a diplomate of the American College of Physicians and a three-term president of the Southeastern Universities Research Association's Council of Presidents. He also is an accomplished researcher and has written widely on health policy.

The Greensboro native is the son of a Carolina alumnus, and he met his wife, the former Barbara Byrd, in Chapel Hill. The Fordhams have three daughters—Pamela Fordham Richey, Susan Fordham Crowell and Betsy Fordham Templeton—all of whom attended UNC.

Fordham completed his certificate of medicine at UNC in 1949 and his M.D. from Harvard Medical School in 1951. After internships and residencies at Georgetown University Hospital, Boston City Hospital and UNC, he served as a medical officer in the U.S. Air Force from 1955-57.

After two years in private practice in Greensboro, Fordham returned to Chapel Hill in 1958 to join the medical school's faculty. He left in 1969 for two years to become dean of medicine at the Medical College of Georgia. He returned to UNC in 1971, becoming dean of the School of Medicine, a post he held until 1979. That tenure was marked by the establishment of the Area Health Education Centers Program, now a national model for decentralized health care, and expansion within the medical school. He served as vice chancellor for health affairs, overseeing one of the few such divisions in the country with five professional health schools on one campus, from 1977-80.

Except for two months, Fordham has remained in Chapel Hill since 1971. Then he served as acting assistant secretary for health and acting surgeon general of the United States at the request of President Jimmy Carter.

Fordham announced last August that he would resign effective June 30, 1988.

The North Carolina media quickly paid tribute to him in their editorial comments. Here are some excerpts:

"'Well done' is a fitting accolade for Christopher C. Fordham, III ...His good and faithful labors have strengthened the institution in countless ways. In physical growth, in academic quality, in public service, the Chapel Hill campus realized notable gains under his administration."

—Winston-Salem Journal

"In seven years as chancellor, he has proved to be not only an eloquent spokesman for the university's tradition and ideals. ...His departure will come at a time when the University has generated 'great momentum' and is poised for a bicentennial leap to even higher stature."

—Charlotte Observer

"No chancellor in recent memory has spoken more articulately and often eloquently than the first one to come out of Health Affairs. Nor more pertinently. We agree with the summary of Philip Carson, chairman of the UNC system Board of Governors, who says Fordham has 'paid attention to the things the chancellor should.'"

—Raleigh Times

"Fordham has been a good steward of the institution. ...He has improved the university's relations with its alumni, strengthened the curriculum and supported greater research programs. He has, as well, supported national reforms in college athletics, despite opposition from coaches and athletic directors on other campuses and even from some university presidents."

—Raleigh News and Observer

Director of Athletics John Swofford

The director of athletics at the University of North Carolina is John Swofford, nationally recognized as one of the best administrators in intercollegiate sports.

Swofford, a 1971 Carolina graduate, is in his eighth year as head of his alma mater's athletic department. The Tar Heel program is one of the biggest in the South, fielding 26 varsity teams, and one of the finest in the nation in terms of success both on and off the playing field.

In his short time as athletic director, Swofford has already seen Carolina teams win 38 Atlantic Coast Conference championships and nine national collegiate titles.

With Swofford in the lead, Carolina successfully completed a $34 million fund-raising drive to construct the Smith Center, a complex which includes a 21,444-seat basketball arena and an Olympic-size swimming pool. Swofford planned the construction of the Student-Athlete Development Center as an addition to Kenan Fieldhouse. That building, a one-of-a-kind facility, includes the most modern equipment to aid student-athletes in their studies and physical development.

A Morehead Scholar himself, Swofford has a special interest in the academic side of intercollegiate athletics. The new academic center at Kenan is a prototype in its field. Swofford has also established a special award to annually honor the top student in each of the Tar Heels' 26 sports. In addition, he has expanded the academic support staff to better serve the student-athletes who use its services.

Since Swofford became athletic director, a new tennis stadium and clubhouse have been built; Boshamer Stadium has been expanded and dressing rooms renovated for the Tar Heel baseball team; three new holes have been completed at Finley Golf Course; the football practice fields have been rebuilt and lighted; a new Astroturf playing field installed; and the Fetzer Field track has been resurfaced.

Nationally, Swofford was appointed to the NCAA Football Television Committee in 1982 and was named its chairman in 1984. He handled the committee during the stormy dispute over football television rights. He is currently chairman of the NCAA Communications Committee. Swofford also is a member of the NCAA Football Post-Season Bowl Committee and is serving on a subcommittee which is investigating a possible national championship playoff. He served as chairman of the ACC Television Committee when the current basketball contract was signed. This is generally considered to be the most lucrative regional television agreement in college sports.

These accomplishments are a good indication Swofford is well aware of the problems facing intercollegiate athletics and how to cope with them. But, Chancellor Christopher Fordham knew that when he named him to replace Bill Cobey as athletic director on May 1, 1980.

The Swoffords: Chad, John, Becky, Autumn and Bogie.

"My single greatest desire is for our program to be a shining example that you can be nationally competitive at the major college level without breaking the rules or prostituting academic integrity," says Swofford.

"Our approach is not complicated. I tell our coaches three things: we want to be competitive for ACC championships, we expect our student-athletes to graduate and cheating will not be tolerated. If we accomplish those things, we can be termed successful."

A native of North Wilkesboro, N.C., Swofford was a two-time all-state football player and a three-sport MVP at Wilkes Central High School. An honor student in high school, he majored in psychology and industrial relations at Carolina.

Swofford played quarterback and defensive back on Tar Heel football teams in 1969, 1970 and 1971. Those last two teams went to bowl games. He tied a then school record against Vanderbilt in 1969 by throwing three touchdown passes in one game.

He was named to the ACC Academic Honor Roll and Who's Who in College Athletics.

In 1973, he earned a masters in athletic administration at Ohio University. In his time there, Swofford served as a graduate assistant to the assistant business manager of athletics.

From 1973 to 1976, he was athletic ticket manager and assistant to the director of athletic facilities and finance at the University of Virginia. He returned to Carolina in May, 1976 as assistant athletic director and business manager, handling all the athletic department's business affairs. Among his many other responsibilities were handling fund-raising affairs, team travel and the athletic dining hall. He also coordinated sports camps.

Although he remained assistant athletic director, Swofford dropped the business manager title and was named assistant executive vice-president of the Educational Foundation in January, 1979. In that job he was in charge of the overall financial structure of the athletic department. His position with the Educational Foundation involved general office procedures, membership services and fundraising.

Swofford is a member of the executive committee of the National Association of Collegiate Directors of Athletics and is on the alumni advisory board for the Ohio University Sports Administration program. He received the Distinguished Alumni Award from Ohio University in 1984. Last spring he was inducted into the Order of the Golden Fleece, Carolina's highest honorary society.

Swofford serves on the board of directors of the Chapel Hill Ronald McDonald House and North Carolina National Bank in Chapel Hill. He also was on the board of directors for North Carolina Amateur Sports which brought the 1987 U.S. Olympic Festival to this area.

A regular jogger, Swofford enjoys reading and tennis. He is married to the former Becky Owens of North Wilkesboro. They have two children, Autumn and Chad.

Head Coach Dean Smith

Dean Smith, regarded by his peers as the best in his profession, is heading into his 27th season as head basketball coach at the University of North Carolina.

In 26 years in Chapel Hill, Smith has established a record that is unmatched in the game today. His teams have won 611 games and lost just 175, an amazing percentage of .777. No one in college basketball can come close to equalling that kind of success.

Thus, it was no surprise that in a 1986 Dallas Morning News poll of head coaches at that year's Final Four, Smith was selected the top college coach in the game. Smith received 49 votes to 33 for Bobby Knight. No one else had more than 20 votes.

Year-in and year-out, Smith's teams are among the best in college basketball. Carolina has finished in the top 10 of both national polls each of the past seven seasons and has won at least 27 games each of those years. No one else can match that current streak of top 10 rankings.

In addition, Smith's teams have the best record in NCAA Tournament play in the decade of the 1980's. The Tar Heels have reached the NCAA's Final 16 for seven straight years.

That kind of consistency has repeatedly drawn Smith the praise of other coaches.

"I think he's the number one guy in America," Michigan coach Bill Frieder said after Carolina had beaten the Wolverines in the second round of last year's NCAA Tournament. "He's always there. It isn't like Louisville or Villanova, where they win it one year and they're way down the next. Even Indiana finished way down in our league a couple of years ago. But with Dean and Carolina, year after year, they're there."

In a career filled with magical moments and memorable milestones, Smith reached another significant standard just last February when he became only the 10th coach in history to post his 600th victory. That victory over Wake Forest appropriately came in the building that bears his name—Carolina's new Smith Center.

Teams coached by Smith have won an NCAA championship, a National Invitation Tournament title and an Olympic Gold Medal. The only other coaches in history to accomplish that feat have been Pete Newell of California and Knight.

Smith's NCAA crown came in 1982 and his 1971 team swept the NIT. He guided the United States to a sweep of the 1976 Summer Olympic Games in Montreal.

Smith, who played for the legendary Phog Allen at Kansas, is also one of only two men to play on an NCAA championship team and then coach one. Knight is the other.

His winning percentage of .777 makes Smith the fifth-winningest coach in history of anyone who has worked at least 10 seasons on the major college level.

During the past 21 seasons, Smith's Tar Heels have been among the most dominant in the game. Carolina has a record of 545-128 in that stretch, a winning percentage of .810. That's an average record of 26-6 each season and has been compiled against an always difficult schedule. No one has won more games than the Tar Heels in those two decades.

Under Smith, Carolina has made seven trips to the NCAA's Final Four. The only coach who has made more Final Four appearances than Smith is UCLA's John Wooden. In NCAA regional championships, Wooden is the leader with 12, followed by Smith with seven.

Wooden and Smith are also the winningest coaches in NCAA Tournament history. Wooden has 47 Tournament victories and Smith ranks second with 36. Kentucky's late Adolph Rupp is third with 30.

Carolina has been in the NCAA Tournament field each of the past 13 seasons. That is the longest current streak in the nation and equals the longest all-time streak set by UCLA from 1967-79.

Smith's teams are the only ones in the country to have finished each of the past four seasons in the top 10 of both final wire service polls. Carolina has a streak of seven straight top 10 finishes and has ended the year there 13 times in the past 14 seasons.

The Tar Heels have now won at least 20 games for 17 consecutive years. That gives Smith the longest streak of consecutive 20-win seasons in history. He also has had 15 seasons in which his teams have won at least 25 games, more than any other major college coach ever. Wooden had 11 seasons of at least 25 victories.

Smith's 611 wins entering the 1987-88 season leave him tied for ninth on the list of all-time victories for coaches who worked at least 10 seasons on the Division I level. He is tied with Cam Henderson of Marshall. Only Ralph Miller of Oregon State with 615 victories ranks ahead of Smith among active coaches. Those ahead of Miller and Smith read like a who's who of great college basketball coaches—Rupp, Allen, Henry Iba of Oklahoma State, Ed Diddle of Western Kentucky, Ray Meyer of DePaul, Wooden and Marv Harshman of Washington.

Percentage-wise, Smith is fifth all-time among coaches with at least 10 seasons in Division I and second among active coaches. He trails only the legendary Clair Bee of Long Island, Jerry Tarkanian of Nevada-Las Vegas, Rupp and Wooden.

The highlight of Smith's career came in 1982 when the Tar Heels defeated Georgetown, 63-62, in one of the most exciting and best played NCAA championship games of all time.

But, perhaps the most amazing accomplishment of all has been the way Smith's teams have dominated Atlantic Coast Conference play in recent years. The Tar Heels have now finished at least third in the ACC for 23 straight seasons. That includes a 19-year stretch in which Carolina was either first or second in the league standings each season. No other school in any other league has ever finished first or second in its conference standings for such a long period.

Carolina has won nine ACC Tournament titles in the last 21 years. The Tar Heels have won either the league's regular-season race or tournament championship 16 times in that same 21-year period and has been to a national post-season tournament each of those 21 seasons.

Success like that was one of the reasons Smith was inducted into the Naismith Basketball Hall of Fame in 1983. He had been taken into the state of North Carolina's Sports Hall of Fame two years prior to that.

Actually, Smith's place among the great men of the game has been obvious for some time. Former Marquette Coach Rick Majerus touched on that five years ago when he heard Joe Wolf, whom he had been recruiting, was going to attend Carolina.

"Joe made a good choice," said Majerus. "North Carolina may very well be the best program in the country and Dean Smith may very well be the best coach of all time."

Such tributes from his peers are nothing new for Smith. For years rival coaches have talked about the consistency of his teams, the integrity of his program and the fact his players are also students.

"When you play against North Carolina and Dean Smith, that's the best," said California coach Lou Campanelli after his James Madison team faced the Tar Heels in the 1983 NCAA Tournament. "That's the epitome of college basketball.

"They represent everything you want—dedication, class, attitude. As we built our program at James Madison, we've paid a lot of attention to that. If that reflects in our style of play, that we resemble North Carolina, then I consider that a compliment."

Virginia Coach Terry Holland touched more specifically on the consistency of Smith's teams a few years ago in talking about the ACC.

"Because of the league we're in, it's difficult to stay at the top every year," he said. "Only one team, North Carolina, has been able to do that. The rest of us have a couple of good years, then we have to fight for a couple of years and put it back together."

Despite all his successes at Carolina, one of Smith's best-known accomplishments actually came elsewhere. In 1976, he guided the United States basketball team to a sweep of the Summer Olympic Games in Montreal. In only a few weeks, he molded a college all-star team into a closely-knit unit. Still, the Americans faced the tremendous challenge of competing against international teams which had been playing together for years.

That team also faced the pressure of trying to regain the Gold Medal which had been lost in the controversial 1972 Games and putting the United States back at the top of international competition. With Smith emphasizing a tough pressure defense and fast-breaking team play on offense, the Americans did just that.

Smith accomplished this feat even though he did not have all of the best amateur players in the United States at his disposal. At that time, many of the top college players were turning down Olympic opportunities, preferring to prepare for professional careers. Players like Robert Parrish, Leon Douglas and John Lucas, for example, spurned Olympic tryouts.

However, the Americans still won the Montreal championship. In fact, four of Smith's Tar Heels played key roles in that Olympic triumph—Mitch Kupchak, Walter Davis, Tommy LaGarde and Phil Ford. Smith has now had players on the last six Olympic teams. In addition to the 1976 players, there were Larry Brown in 1964, Charlie Scott in 1968, Bobby Jones in 1972, Al Wood in 1980 and Sam Perkins and Michael Jordan in 1984.

How has Smith accomplished all this?

It's a combination of things. He has tremendous rapport with his players, he is a master teacher and his style of play gets amazing results.

Former Marquette Coach Al McGuire may have put it best when he said, "If anyone was ever born to be a coach, it's Dean Smith. He's the Jack Armstrong type person."

Carolina teams under Smith are known for unselfish play, great teamwork and a tenacious man-to-man defense. Although the Tar Heels specialize in a whirlwind, fast-breaking offense, they also have a disciplined attack and always rank among the national leaders in field goal percentage.

A recent NCAA study of the past two decades showed that Carolina ranked first nationally in that period in field goal percentage, third in average victory margin and seventh in scoring.

That high ranking in scoring is no surprise. Although Smith is sometimes kidded about coaching "slowdowns" because of the four corners offense he uses late in some games, his teams usually rank among the scoring leaders. In fact, the Tar Heels finished second in the nation in scoring last year at 91.2 points per game.

Among Smith's many innovations are his run-and-jump defense, the mixing of pressure defenses, the point zone, team huddles at the foul line, the free-lance passing game, the four corners offense and the scramble defense.

"Dean is one of the most organized and brilliant minds that I've ever met in basketball," says Georgetown Coach John Thompson, the 1988 U.S. Olympic coach. "He has had a great effect on my thinking. He shared ideas and thoughts and philosophies with me that people just don't share with people, and I will always be grateful and respect him for that. He did me a tremendous favor. One of the greatest gifts you can share with somebody is the knowledge that you have."

Smith has also shared his success at Carolina with those around him. Two of his former assistants, John Lotz and Kenny Rosemond, left Carolina to take head coaching jobs in the Southeastern Conference. Larry Brown, a former player and coach under Smith, is now the head coach at Smith's alma mater, Kansas. Eddie Fogler, another former Tar Heel player who had worked on Smith's staff for 13 years, took the head coaching job at Wichita State in 1986.

Smith's current assistants, Bill Guthridge and Roy Williams, have all turned down head coaching jobs at major universities to remain in Chapel Hill. Smith, himself, has been offered numerous other coaching jobs, both on the college and professional level.

Interest of professional teams in Smith is no surprise. In the last 21 years alone, 31 of Smith's players have gone on to play pro basketball in this country and many others have played professionally in Europe.

Seven of Smith's players have won pro rookie-of-the-year honors—Billy Cunningham, Charlie Scott, Robert McAdoo, Bobby Jones, Walter Davis, Phil Ford and Michael Jordan. It is no coincidence that so many Tar Heel players have been successful in the NBA. Carolina players seem to make the adjustment from college to the pros quite easily. Jordan, in fact, won some NBA Player-of-the-Year honors as a rookie.

Kevin Loughery, who coached Jordan in Chicago, gave Smith a lot of credit for Michael's quick success.

"Michael has had the most media hype I've ever seen in professional basketball and I was around Dr. J for three years," said Loughery. "He has handled it all extremely well.

"It's a tremendous tribute to the way Dean Smith, who is one of the greatest coaches of all time, handled this guy. You can see his training. We are very fortunate that he has had that coaching background."

Pat Riley of the Los Angeles Lakers recently paid Smith a similar compliment in talking about James Worthy.

"I think James' success is based directly on how he was coached in college," said Riley. "We always look for players from North Carolina. If we could draft players from North Carolina every year, we'd do it. You know they know how to play. The players are so full of character like James and Michael Jordan. I have a lot of respect for Coach Smith. I'm the beneficiary of a man who has taught all these guys how to play the game. When they come to the pros, they're refined. They're ready to step right in."

Bobby Jones once gave Smith credit for his professional career in an interview with the New York Times.

"If I had gone to any other school, I probably would not have been in pro basketball," said Jones. "I was a shy and gangly kid, not very well coordinated when I began playing basketball in junior high school. At North Carolina they gave me the tools to play in the pros and I don't want to forget it."

Of course, Smith's players have performed pretty well in college as well as on the professional level. He has had more All-Americas than any active coach. On five occasions, Smith's players have been named National Player of the Year—Ford in 1978, James Worthy in 1982, Jordan in both 1983 and 1984 and Kenny Smith in 1987. Jordan was a unanimous selection in the latter season.

A native of Emporia, Kan. and a graduate of Topeka High School, Smith attended the University of Kansas on an academic scholarship. He played freshman football and varsity basketball and baseball there. He was a member of Jayhawk basketball teams which won the national championship in 1952 and finished second in 1953.

Smith was assistant basketball coach and golf coach at the Air Force Academy in 1958 when he was brought to Carolina by Frank McGuire. He served as one of McGuire's assistants until being named head coach in 1961. That followed McGuire's departure to the NBA.

After taking Carolina to the NCAA title game in 1977, Smith was named National Coach-of-the-Year by the National Association of Basketball Coaches. He received that same honor from the U.S. Basketball Writers Association in 1979 and from Medalist in 1982. He has been named the ACC's Coach-of-the-Year on six occasions.

Smith is a great goodwill ambassador for the University. He is called upon to lecture at basketball clinics all over the world. He is a past president of the NABC. He was the only basketball coach among a group of college presidents who recently served on the NCAA Select Committee, which was appointed to study many of the problems facing intercollegiate athletics today.

Smith has won the prestigious Golden Plate Award from the American Academy of Achievement which honors people from all fields. The only other coaches ever to receive that award have been Wooden, Bud Wilkinson, Bear Bryant, Joe Paterno and Tom Landry.

In his spare time Smith enjoys golf, tennis, music and reading. He has a special interest in theology.

Smith has five children. Daughters Sandy and Mrs. Sharon Kepley are Carolina graduates as is son Scott. Smith also has two younger daughters, Kristen Caroline and Kelly Marie. In addition, he has two grandchildren, Drew and Megan Kepley. Smith's wife, Linnea, is a physician.

Chief Assistant Coach Bill Guthridge

One of the premier coaches in college basketball is Bill Guthridge, chief assistant on Dean Smith's staff at the University of North Carolina.

Guthridge, now in his 21st season in Chapel Hill, is involved in all phases of the Tar Heel program. He has a thorough knowledge of all aspects of his profession—teaching, organizing, motivating and recruiting.

His reputation is such that Guthridge's name is usually mentioned when there is a major college vacancy even though he has indicated he is not interested in leaving Carolina. He has turned down several head coaching jobs and has had his name withdrawn from consideration for others.

"Bill has made a decision to stay in Chapel Hill and not seek other head coaching positions," says Smith. "I personally feel he should have taken several of the excellent opportunities he has had, but he's decided that's not what he wants.

"By staying here, he has certainly given great stability to our program. He's one of the top coaches in America and I'm including head coaches as well as assistants. His record as an assistant, first at Kansas State, and then here, has been tremendous. He has made great contributions to both programs."

A 1960 Kansas State graduate, Guthridge has been connected with great teams throughout his basketball career. He played on three Wildcat teams which won Big Eight championships and has been a part of some of the greatest seasons in Tar Heel history.

In fact, Guthridge has been to the NCAA's Final Four a total of eight times—six as an assistant at Carolina, once as an assistant at Kansas State and once as a player at KSU.

Guthridge first came to Chapel Hill for the 1967-68 season. The Tar Heels have been in a national post-season tournament in all of his 20 years here. In that 20-year period, Carolina has finished as low as third in the Atlantic Coast Conference standings only once, has won either the ACC regular-season or tournament title 15 times, won the 1971 NIT and captured the NCAA championship in 1982.

Bill was also a key factor in the United States' basketball triumph in the 1976 Summer Olympic Games. He and Georgetown's John Thompson served as assistant coaches to Smith and also scouted the Americans' opponents.

In his time at Carolina, Guthridge has worked with both the team's offensive and defensive schemes. He is currently the Tar Heel shooting instructor. It is no coincidence that Carolina annually shoots better than 50 percent from the field. In fact, the Tar Heels have the best field goal percentage of any team in the country over the last two decades. Carolina has been second nationally in field goal percentage the past two years, including a school-record 55.9 percent in 1986. The Tar Heels had been third in the country three seasons ago and second in 1984.

A native of Parsons, Kan., Guthridge played his high school basketball for Harold Johnson, one of two brothers who were innovators of the zone press in the 1930's.

At Kansas State, he helped the Wildcats win the Big Eight championship in 1958, 1959 and 1960. Based on his leadership, academic record and athletic accomplishments, he was chosen one of the University's 13 most outstanding all-around seniors.

Following graduation, Guthridge coached at Scott City High School in Kansas for two years before returning to his alma mater as an assistant to Tex Winter. During his time on the KSU staff, the Wildcats posted a 93-43 record, swept two Big Eight titles and once advanced to the Final Four.

In his first six years at Carolina, Guthridge coached Tar Heel freshman and junior varsity teams. He had a 72-25 record and won the Big Four championship four times, an outstanding feat in those days.

Smith gives him much credit for helping develop the players who have kept Carolina among the top basketball powers in the nation.

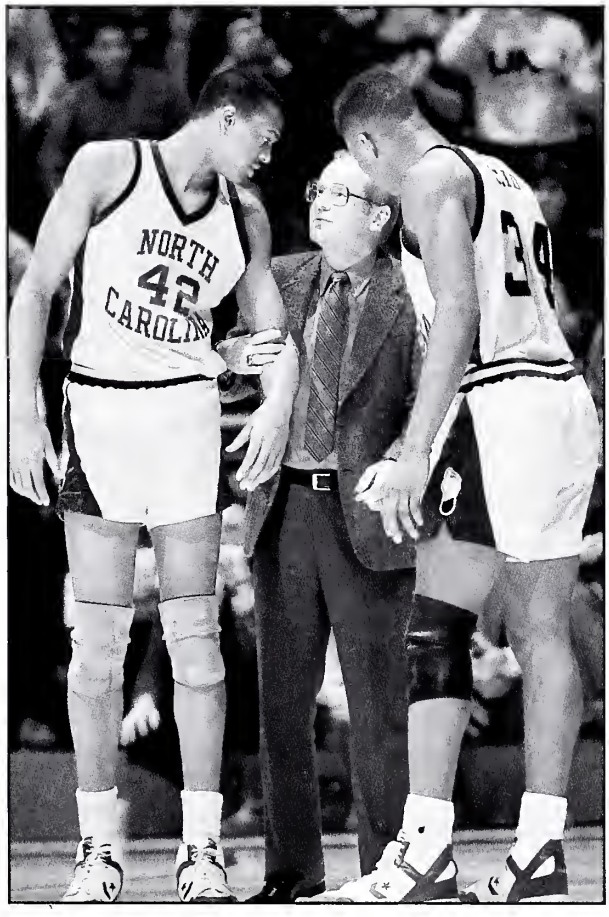
Besides working with Smith and Winter, two of the great names in coaching, Guthridge has also coached in Puerto Rico summer leagues twice. He was once named coach-of-the-year and was invited to coach the 1968 Puerto Rican Olympic team.

Of course, Guthridge's greatest notoriety has come for his work at Carolina.

"Bill is highly respected by the players who have been through our program," says Smith. "He is sincere in his recruiting and I think that has made him a favorite of prospective student-athletes and their families. He is a man of great integrity."

Unlike many coaches, Guthridge says he actually enjoys recruiting.

"Some people say recruiting is undesirable, that it's the worst part of being a college coach," he says. "But my experiences have been very enjoyable. I think that has a lot to do with the type of young man which our univerity attracts."



Bill is considered an excellent judge of talent at the high school level. When he believes a high school player can develop into an excellent college player, his past record indicates he's right. Former Tar Heel star Bobby Jones is a prime example.

Guthridge, who got his B.S. in mathematics, has a master's degree in education and has taken courses at Carolina toward his Ph.D.

Guthridge has an excellent sense of humor and is one of the most popular after-dinner speakers in the Carolina athletic department.

Bill and his wife, Leesie, have two sons, Jamie and Stuart, and a daughter, Megan.

Assistant Coach Roy Williams

One of the best young coaches in college basketball is Roy Williams, who is heading into his 10th season on the North Carolina staff.

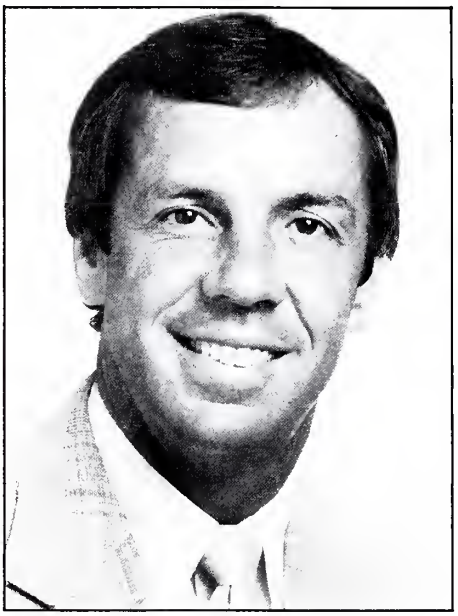
In his nine years in Chapel Hill, Williams has gained a wealth of experience in all phases of what many consider the top college basketball program in the nation. He has coached the Tar Heel junior varsity, assisted with the varsity and assisted in recruiting and scouting.

In the spring of 1986, Williams took on Eddie Fogler's recruiting duties when Fogler resigned to become the head coach at Wichita State. Williams had spent the previous three seasons in Chapel Hill with the varsity players, working on a conditioning program.

"Roy had not been out on the road recruiting for a couple of years," says Carolina Coach Dean Smith, "and I think that's one of the reasons he turned down a major college head coaching job here in the South two years ago.

"In the past, he has done a great job in recruiting. The last time he was heavily involved in that aspect of our program, he was instrumental in recruiting the class of 1984, which included Sam Perkins and Matt Doherty."

On the court itself, Williams works closely with Carolina's big men, helping them with their rebounding and positioning. He also works with Bill



Guthridge on the Tar Heels' shooting techniques.

Athough Williams has already turned down a couple of Division I head coaching jobs, he does want to be a head coach at some point in the future. Smith says he will be an exceptional one.

"Roy is a highly-organized person who has all the characteristics of a great coach," says Smith. "He genuinely cares a great deal about his players. He's played a key role in the success we've had here in recent years.

"His goal is to be a head coach and he will be an outstanding one. He has a good rapport with the student-athlete, as well as all kinds of people. He is well respected in our profession. In fact, several college head coaches have come to Chapel Hill for advice and ideas from Roy.

"He has certainly proven himself as a college coach with the job his junior varsity teams have done against junior colleges and prep schools. For instance, with his tallest player at 6-4, his teams played very well against Fork Union when that school had first Melvin Turpin and then Chris Washburn."

A native of Asheville, N.C., Williams played basketball and baseball at T.C. Roberson High School. He was a member of the freshman basketball team at Carolina during the 1968-69 season. He is a 1972 Tar Heel graduate and also got his master's degree here.

Prior to returning to Chapel Hill in 1978 as a member of Smith's staff, Williams had spent five seasons as athletic director and head basketball coach at Owen High School in Swannanoa, N.C.

Williams is an avid golfer and shoots in the low 70's. Roy and his wife, Wanda, have a son, Scott, and a daughter, Kimberly.

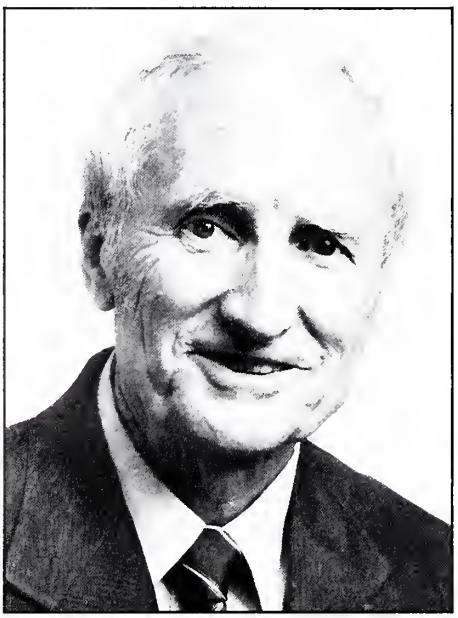
Administrative Assistant Dick Harp

The newest member of North Carolina's basketball staff is Dick Harp, former head coach at the University of Kansas, who serves as an administrative assistant to Dean Smith.,

Harp came to Chapel Hill in the summer of 1986, giving Smith a five-man staff for the first time in his 27 years at Carolina.

A Kansas graduate, Harp was captain of the 1940 Jayhawk team which lost to Indiana in the NCAA Finals. He joined Phog Allen's coaching staff there in 1948 and was an assistant in 1952 when Kansas won the national championship and in 1953 when the Jayhawks were the NCAA runners-up. Smith played on both of those teams.

When Allen retired following the 1956 season, Harp took over the head job. His first team was 24-3, losing the NCAA championship game to Carolina in triple overtime.



Harp coached until 1964, resigning to become managing director of the Fellowship of Christian Athletes. He had an eight-year coaching record of 121-82. He retired from the FCA as senior vice-president in 1983 and had been living in Kansas City when Smith coaxed him back into college athletics.

"I'm delighted we've been able to attract Dick back to college basketball," says Smith. "He has one of the best basketball minds of anyone I know. He certainly means a lot to our program as a teacher on the playing floor and as an administrator because of his experience running the FCA offices.

"When I played at Kansas, I know our entire squad held him in the highest regard. I'm sure the players on our teams here will gain a great deal from their relationship with him."

Harp and his wife, Martha Sue, have a son and three grandchildren.

Head Junior Varsity Coach Randy Wiel

The youngest member of the Carolina basketball staff is Randy Wiel, a former Tar Heel player.

Formerly a graduate assistant coach, Wiel is in his second season as the head junior varsity coach. He was given the new position in the spring of 1986 after Eddie Fogler resigned to become head coach at Wichita State University. Wiel now handles many of Roy Williams' old duties with Williams taking over Fogler's responsibilities.

A native of Curacao in the Netherlands Antilles, Wiel played on Carolina teams from 1975 to 1979, earning four letters.

He earned his master's degree in education from Carolina in 1986.

Wiel spent six seasons in Europe playing professional basketball after leaving Chapel Hill. He was his league's Rookie-of-the-Year in 1980 and MVP in both 1981 and 1984. He twice led his league in scoring.

Randy was a member of the Holland National Team for six years.

"As a player at Carolina, Randy always represented the University well," says Coach Dean Smith. "He's respected by everyone in our program and does a fine job with his new duties."

Wiel was married to the former Connie Hicks in summer 1986.

The History of Carolina Basketball

By Dave Lohse,

Research by Larry Needle,
Sports Information Student Assistant

Walter Davis caps an amazing rally at the buzzer by sinking this halfcourt shot against Duke in 1974. UNC rallied from eight points down with 17 seconds left to tie the game on Davis' shot and then went on to win in overtime.

North Carolina. It's a magical name in college basketball. No school in the country can boast of a stronger tradition in the hoop game.

In 77 seasons of intercollegiate competition, Carolina has posted a record of 1403-515. Only Kentucky, which has played the game seven seasons longer can boast of more victories. It has won 1,426 or only 23 more games. Carolina and Kentucky also boast the two best winning percentages in the history of college basketball. Carolina's all-time winning percentage of .731 is rather remarkable in itself. Carolina basketball teams have won nearly three out of every four games since the program started.

Only nine of the 77 Tar Heel teams have suffered through losing seasons and no Carolina coach has ever retired with a cumulative losing mark. The closest was Fred Boye who went 18-17 in 1920-21. From 1911 through 1952, the UNC program had 13 different head coaches. None stayed for more than six years. Since then, the program has had only two coaches—Frank McGuire for nine years and Dean Smith for 26. Each led Carolina to an NCAA championship.

The first UNC team played in 1911. It was part of physical education classes at the University, but student Marvin Ritch led the drive for an organized team. Nathaniel Cartmell, then UNC's track and field coach who was internationally known in his own right as a sprinter, coached that first team.

Carolina played its first game February 3, 1911, beating Virginia Christian 42-21. The team played its games in Bynum Gymnasium, now the site of the University cashier's office. Carolina went 7-4 that first season, playing the likes of Tennessee, the Woodberry Forest School of Virginia and the Durham and Charlotte YMCA's. At the time, a crowd of 50 spectators for a game was considered enormous.

Cartmell was to coach the Tar Heel cagers to a 26-23 record over his four seasons. His 1912 team was only 4-5, but several thousand fans came to see the Heels play Virginia A&M in the Raleigh Auditorium, a sign that interest in and support of the sport was growing.

In 1915, Charles Doak became the coach of the Tar Heels. His 1916 squad went 12-6, the best record in the first decade of the sport in Chapel Hill. Doak had been the baseball coach for Carolina before taking over the basketball duties.

In 1917, Carolina scored its first victory over then arch-rival Virginia in 13 tries, 35-24. That Tar Heel team was led by George Tennent, captain of both the 1917 and '18 Carolina squads. Luther Hodges, later to be governor of North Carolina, was a substitute on the 1917 team. Howell Peacock coached the Tar Heels for three seasons beginning in 1917 and racked up a 23-14 mark in that time.

In 1920, Fred Boye took over as head coach at Carolina. He stayed two years and compiled an 18-17 ledger. Ironically, that's the worst cumulative record for any coach in Tar Heel hoop history.

The 1922 squad played without an official coach and went 14-6. Carolina went to Atlanta and swept the Southern Conference tournament, winning five games in five days. The Heels captured the final over Mercer, 40-25. The '22 squad was led by Cartwright "Cart" Carmichael, who was then a sophomore. He went on to be one of Carolina's all-time great players. He became UNC's first All-America in any sport in 1923 and '24 and he was an All-Southern Conference pick from '22 through '24.

The five-year period beginning in 1922 was actually a glorious one for Carolina despite the fact the Tar Heels played with no coach in 1922 and '23 and with three different coaches the following three years. Carolina went 93-14 in the five-year span and won four of five Southern Conference titles and the national championship in 1924.

The 1923 team set the stage for that magnificent '24 squad by going 15-1, losing a 34-32 thriller to Ole Miss in the Southern Conference tourney final.

The '24 team proved to be something else. Led by Jack "Spratt" Cobb, Carmichael and Bill Dodderer, it rolled to a 26-0 record and was named national champion by the Helms Foundation. Carolina's eight-man squad played for the first time in 1924 in the Indoor Athletic Center, better known as "The Tin Can." It stood on the site of what is now Fetzer Gymnasium.

Norman Shepard coached the Tar Heels in '24. It was his only season as Tar Heel mentor. He left the next year to pursue business ventures abroad. Carolina students waited at the telegraph office to hear the score of the Southern Conference championship game and when it was heard that UNC had beaten Alabama, 26-18, the celebration began with bells ringing at the Old South Building for an hour.

In 1925, Monk McDonald coached a Cobb-led Tar Heel squad to another Southern Conference title and an 18-5 record. Harlan Sanborn coached the '26 squad to a 20-5 mark. That team was led by National Player-of-the-Year Cobb and Dodderer, an All-Southern choice from '24 through '26. Cobb, who averaged 15 points a game, unheard of in that day, was named an All-America for the third straight year. Thousands gathered in Memorial Hall to hear a telegraphic play-by-play of the Southern Conference championship game as Carolina downed Mississippi State, 37-23.

James Ashmore began an impressive five-year coaching stint with the Tar Heels in 1927. His teams were led by players like Billy Morris, Puny Harper and Bunn and Rufus Hackney. Ashmore's teams compiled a 79-37 mark in his tenure, but they never won a Southern Conference title, in fact never even reached the finals.

Norman Shepard's brother, George "Bo" Shepard, took over as coach in 1932. He brought Carolina back to national acclaim quickly. The "Charlotte Connection" provided many of the best players for UNC at that time because of the strong high school and YMCA programs in that part of the state.

Guard Tom Alexander and forward Virgil Weathers, both All-Southern choices, led the '32 team to a 16-5 mark, losing 26-24 in the Southern Conference final to Georgia.

After that '32 season, the Southern Conference lost 13 schools which went on to form what is now the Southeastern Conference. There now were 10 schools remaining in the Southern Conference and the site of competition was changed to Raleigh.

In 1933, Shepard needed a big man for rebounding purposes and to control the jump after each score which was a part of the game at that time. He found his man in Jack Glace, who hadn't even made his high school squad. The Heels went 12-5 that season and lost a double overtime thriller to powerhouse South Carolina, 34-32, in the semifinals of the Southern Conference tourney. Latge in the game as the Gamecocks were attempting a free throw, the officials called a technical foul on the "home" crowd for its behavior even though the game was being played 30 miles from Chapel Hill. The call is still questioned today but it helped the Gamecocks tie the score and send the game into overtime where they eventually won.

The 1934 Carolina team finished 18-4, losing to Duke in the Southern Conference tourney. Dave McCachren was the captain of that Carolina squad and was the first of four McCachren brothers to play at UNC from 1931 to '43. Each brother captained the Tar Heel team his senior year and each was elected president of the UNC athletic association. Besides Dave, there was Jim, who was probably the best of the four, being named All-Southern three times, as well as Bill and George, who was known by the nickname "Toad."

The 1935 team won the conference championship and compiled a gaudy 23-2 mark in Shepard's last year as head coach. After that season Shepard stepped down because of health reasons and Walter Skidmore became head coach. Skidmore continued the winning ways in Chapel Hill, leading the 1936 team to a 21-4 record and the Southern Conference title. That 1936 unit was led by Pete Mullis and Andy Bershak, who was also an All-America end in football.

Carolina had good yeas in 1937 and '38, but failed to win the Southern Conference title either time. Then, in 1939, Carolina suffered its first losing campaign in 19 years and Skidmore stepped down as coach. He was replaced for the 1940 season by Bill Lange, then an assistant football coach under Ray Wolf.

The 1940 Carolina team proved to be a very good one. Led by George Glamack, who was nicknamed the "Blind Bomber," UNC went 20-3. The 6-6 junior from Johnstown, Pa., could barely see the basket because of impaired vision, but his foul line hook shot was lethal. Glamack became only the third player ever designated as National Player-of-the-Year by the Helms Foundation twice, both in 1940 and in '41. Glamack was also a two-time All-America for the Heels.

Other stars on those teams of the early 1940's were Paul Severin, a two-time All-America end in football, and Bob Rose, an All-Southern Conference player in 1941. Glamack averaged 20.6 points a game for the Tar Heels, an amazing statistic given the fact teams only scored in the 40's and 50's during that era.

As in other sports, the World War II years in basketball were crazy ones. The Carolina team lost many players to service obligations during this time—in fact, only one letterman was available for the 1943 team. In 1944, the Tar Heels played 11 contests against service teams. Lange stepped down as coach after the 1944 season and his five-year record was an impressive 86-40.

Ben Carnevale took over as head coach in 1945 and the Tar Heels motored to an outstanding 22-6 ledger and the Southern Conference championship. The star of that team was Jim Jordan, who was named an All-America that season.

The 1946 team was an outstanding one. Led by All-America John "Hook" Dillon, Jordan and 6-6 Horace "Bones" McKinney, it made it all the way to the NCAA championship game before losing to Oklahoma A&M 43-40. McKinney had left N.C. State to resume his post-World War II career at Carolina and he helped lead the Heels to a 30-5 mark. Carnevale left after the season was over to take the coaching job at the Naval Academy. He was replaced by Tom Scott.

The Carolina bench explodes as Charlie Scott's jump shot at the buzzer gives Carolina an 87-85 victory over Davidson in the finals of the 1969 East Regional in College Park, Md. The shot sent UNC to its third straight Final Four.

At this time, basketball in the South was booming. North Carolina State was becoming a formidable rival and the Southern Conference Tournament was moved to Duke Indoor Stadium for additional seating.

Scott's first team, in 1947, was led by Jim Hamilton and Bob Paxton. It posted a 19-8 record and lost in the conference finals to N.C. State. Unfortunately, that would be the first of 15 successive losses to the Wolfpack.

Scott produced 20-win seasons in both '48 and '49, but lost thrice to N.C. State each year, including heartbreakers in the tournament. Coy Carson and Hugo Kappler both made All-Southern Conference in 1949.

The next three campaigns produced a trio of mediocre records and Scott resigned following the '52 season. He was replaced by Frank McGuire, a 38-year-old native of Greenwich Village in New York City. Formerly the coach at St. John's in Jamaica, N.Y., McGuire was successful at luring many outstanding New York basketball stars to Chapel Hill through his connections to the area, the first of whom was Jerry Vayda.

McGuire's first team, in 1953, proved to be a scrappy unit. It didn't have great talent, but it ended up 17-10 and beat N.C. State in Raleigh, breaking a six-year losing streak to the Pack. The next two years produced average records, 11-10 in 1954 and 10-11 a yar later, but McGuire was building a foundation for future greatness. Lennie Rosenbluth, from New York City, debuted for the Tar Heels in 1955 as a sophomore and averaged 25.5 points per game.

In 1956, a great new class joined holdovers Rosenbluth, Vayda, Tony Radovich and Bob Young. The new sophomore class included Pete Brennan, Tommy Kearns, Joe Quigg, Bob Cunningham and Roy Searcy. That '56 team went 18-5 setting the stage for what happened a year later.

In 1957, McGuire had a lineup that consisted of the 6-6 Brennan, 6-5 Rosenbluth and 6-9 Quigg on the front line with Cunningham and Kearns in the backcourt. En route to its 32-0 record, Carolina had to avoid a couple of close calls in the regular season against Duke and a double overtime contest versus Maryland. The closest call of all may have come in the ACC Tournament semifinals when the Heels edged Wake Forest 61-59. Once in the NCAA's, Carolina swept past three opponents to set up a meeting with Michigan State in the semifinals.

It took three overtimes, but Carolina finally vanquished the Spartans, 74-70. That set the stage for a showdown with Dick Harp's Kansas Jayhawks, led by the great Wilt "The Stilt" Chamberlain. At Kansas City's old Municipal Auditorium, UNC needed another three overtimes to subdue KU, 54-53, on Quigg's two free throws with six seconds to play. Thousands turned out at the airport to welcome their conquering heroes home. Rosenbluth concluded his brilliant career by being named an All-America, All-ACC for the third straight year and the Helms National Player-of-the-Year.

In 1958, a Carolina team led by All-America and ACC Player-of-the-Year Brennan finished 19-7. Lee Shaffer and Dick Kepley, soon to be Carolina stars in their own right, joined the squad as sophomores. The 1959 team may have been McGuire's second best among his nine teams at UNC. Doug Moe, York Larese and Lou Brown joined the team and Carolina finished 20-5, losing in the finals of the ACC Tourna ment and in the first round of the NCAA Tournament to Navy.

A year later, Carolina had another outstanding season under McGuire. The Heels finished 18-6 overall, losing to Duke in the ACC tourney. Shaffer was named a first team All-America that year.

That 1961 season produced a good team and a 19-4 record. It was the senior year for Moe, Larese and Kepley. Moe was an All-America that season and together with Larese, they were called the L&M twins. McGuire chose to accept an offer from the Philadelphia Warriors of the NBA at this time. His nine-season record at Carolina was a brilliant 164-58.

The man who stepped into the void was a native Kansan by the name of Dean Edwards Smith. He had been lured to Carolina a few years earlier from the Air Force Academy to be McGuire's assistant. He assumed the head coaching duties at age 30 and since has built a program that is a model for integrity and success in college athletics.

Coach Smith's first team in 1962 compiled an 8-9 record, his only losing season as a head coach. But his players did give him a victory in his first coaching outing, 80-46 over Virginia. It would prove to be a harbinger of things to come. After that victory, Smith said, "I've never been as scared in my life."

In 1963, Billy Cunningham, affectionately known as "The Kangaroo Kid," joined the varsity and became an immediate star. Averaging 22.7 points and 16 rebounds, he helped lead the Tar Heels to a 15-6 record. A year later, Cunningham was still awesome, but the Tar Heels' record dipped to 12-12. Help for the future arrived in highly-touted frosh Bob Lewis.

Lewis moved up to the varsity in '65 and with All-America Cunningham, the two combined for 46.4 points per game as Carolina went 15-9. Cunningham left Carolina as its all-time leader in rebounds and one of the most prolific rebounders in conference history. A two-time All-America and three-time All-ACC selection, he went on to a great professional playing and coaching career, mainly with the Philadelphia 76ers.

For 1966, Cunningham was gone, but Lewis was now joined by soon-to-be superstar Larry Miller. The Tar Heels moved out of Woollen Gymnasium and into 8,800-seat Carmichael Auditorium which would evolve into one of the most famous arenas in college basketball history. The '66 squad finished only 16-11, but it was obvious greatness was just around the corner.

The 1967 team proved to be Coach Smith's first truly great squad at Carolina. Lewis and Miller were joined on the varsity by sophomores like 6-11 Rusty Clark, Bill Bunting, Dick Grubar and Joe Brown. The season resulted in a 26-6 ledger and the Tar Heels finished third in the final Associated Press poll and fourth in United Press International. The '67 campaign marked the beginning of a string of three successive first-place finishes in the ACC regular-season standings, three straight ACC tourney titles and three consecutive NCAA East Regional championships for Smith and his troops. The '67 squad was characterized by an enthusiastic, gambling defense that has become a trademark of Smith teams.

Lewis graduated after '67, but the great Charlie Scott arrived to take his place in the Carolina lineup as the Heels prepared for the 1968 season. Scott was the first black player on the Carolina varsity and he started from the beginning of his sophomore year. The '68 team was an outstanding one and made it all the way to the NCAA finals before losing to UCLA and Lew Alcindor. The Heels' final record that year was 28-4, best yet under Smith's tutelage. Miller was All-America and All-ACC for the second straight year.

Michael Jordan connects on a memorable shot in UNC history against Tulane in Carmichael Auditorium early in the 1982-83 season. On the verge of starting the season 0-3, Carolina trailed the Green Wave 53-51 with three seconds left in regulation. But Jordan stole the Tulane inbounds pass and sunk this 35-footer, tying the game. UNC went on to win in double overtime.

Heading into 1969, Miller was gone, but the remaining core of those great teams returned. Carolina went 27-5, won the ACC's for the third straight year and was again in the Final Four. Scott, Bunting, Clark and Grubar led that team as well as junior guard Eddie Fogler.

The 1970 squad entered that season decimated by graduation. The tremendous seniors of the year before—Bunting, Clark and Grubar—had graduated. Carolina finished 18-9 but was buoyed by the addition of sophomores Dennis Wuycik, Bill Chamberlain and Steve Previs, all solid players. Scott made All-ACC for the third consecutive year and first team All-America for the second. In his final home game, Scott left to a thunderous standing ovation when Smith took him out. The crowd chanted "We want Scott!" and Smith reinserted him in the lineup and of course, Scott responded with a basket. Carolina lost in the first round of the ACC Tournament that year and accepted an NIT bid. It would be the last time UNC failed to win 20 games in a season.

The 1971 team was not expected to do much in the pre-season ratings. But it rolled up a 26-6 record and won the ACC regular-season title and the NIT championship. Sophomore George Karl moved up to the varsity and formed a great backcourt with Previs. Wuycik was a first team All-ACC choice and Chamberlain the Most Valuable Player of the NIT.

Carolina returned to the Final Four in 1972 with a 26-5 record. Robert McAdoo, a junior college transfer, was outstanding for the Heels that year along with returnees Wuycik, Chamberlain, Karl and Previs. Sixth-man Bobby Jones, a 6-8 sophomore, showed great promise for the future. Carolina's record was 26-5 and the Heels won the ACC regular-season and tournament titles before losing to Florida State in the NCAA Final Four. After the season, McAdoo declared himself eligible for the NBA draft.

Carolina returned to the NIT in 1973 and reached the semifinals after losing in the first round of the ACC Tournament. The 25-8 squad was led by the play of Karl and, in the first year freshmen were again eligible to play under NCAA rules, Mitch Kupchak showed signs of greatness inside.

The 1974 team was led by All-America and All-ACC player Jones. It compiled a 22-6 record and made a return trip to the NIT after losing to Maryland in the ACC semifinals. That team featured a freshman class of Walter Davis, Tommy LaGarde and John Kuester, which would lead Carolina back to the Final Four three years later. The season will also be remembered for the memorable comeback the Tar Heels made against Duke in Carmichael Auditorium. Trailing by eight points with 17 seconds to play, the Heels rallied to tie the contest on a half-court shot by Davis as time expired. UNC went on to win in overtime, 96-92.

In 1975, the wonderous Phil Ford arrived on campus as a freshman and he had an immediate impact on Carolina basketball fortunes. He became the first freshman under Smith to start the first game of his freshman year, a feat since matched by Mike O'Koren, James Worthy, Michael Jordan, Kenny Smith and J.R. Reid. As a frosh, Ford won the Everett Case Award as MVP of the ACC tourney as Carolina beat defending national champion N.C. State in the finals, 70-66. The Tar Heels had had to survive overtime games with Wake Forest and Clemson in the first two rounds of the tourney just to get to the title game. Overall, that Carolina team finished 23-8 and was eliminated in the NCAA East Regional by Syracuse.

A year later, in Kupchak's senior year, the Tar Heels had one of their best teams ever under Smith, but it was undone by injuries and bad luck at season's end. First team All-Americas Kupchak and Ford led UNC to a 25-4 mark and a 13-1 ACC slate. But Carolina was upset in the ACC finals by Virginia and then lost to Alabama in the first round of the NCAA's with Ford hurt.

That summer, however, Carolina would mine Olympic gold in Montreal in a big way as Kupchak, LaGarde, Ford and Davis would all play on the victorious U.S. squad which was coached by Smith and his Carolina assistant, Bill Guthridge.

The 1977 campaign marked a return to the Final Four for the first time in five years as UNC posted a 28-5 mark. A mid-season knee injury to LaGarde ended his career early and then Davis broke his thumb in the ACC tourney semifinals. Led by Kuester, the Tar Heels persevered and beat Virginia in the tournament finals. Carolina used its up-tempo style to perfection in conjunction with the four corners offense in scoring NCAA wins over Purdue, Notre Dame, Kentucky and UNLV. All were of the comeback variety save the win over the Wildcats. Ford was hurt in the Notre Dame game and played the remainder of the tourney at less than 100 percent. After freshman O'Koren helped the Heels into the finals with 31 against Vegas, the Tar Heels fell to Marquette, 67-59, in the championship contest.

The 1978 team had to play minus LaGarde, Davis and Kuester—no easy task. It was Ford's senior year and the Rocky Mount, N.C., native would be tapped for National Player-of-the-Year honors as UNC went 23-8. In an emotional Carmichael farewell, Ford scored a career-high 34 as UNC beat Duke 87-83 to clinch first place in the regular-season standings over the Blue Devils. Losses to Wake Forest in the ACC Tournament and San Francisco in the NCAA Tournament would dampen Tar Heel spirits, but couldn't diminish the greatness of Ford, a three-time All-America and Carolina's all-time leading scorer.

The 1979 squad was not picked highly in the pre-season but won Smith ACC and National Coach-of-the-Year honors after finishing 23-6. O'Koren, senior defensive wizard Dudley Bradley and sophomore sharpshooter Al Wood led this squad. During the regular season, UNC beat eventual national champion Michigan State and scored an infamous 70-69 win at N.C. State on Bradley's last-second steal and dunk.

Carolina tied for the regular-season championship with Duke and beat the Blue Devils 71-63 in the ACC tourney finals. The season ended in frustration with an upset loss to Penn in the NCAA's, and Bradley went on to the pros.

The 1980 squad was led by a senior class which featured O'Koren, a first team All-America in 1979 and 1980. The Heels finished 21-8, losing to Duke in the ACC semifinals and to Texas A&M in the NCAA's.

The 1981 team would start a string of seven straight Carolina teams that have won a minimum of 27 games. Led by Wood and Worthy, UNC finished 29-8 in 1981 and won the ACC Tournament and reached the Final Four where it beat conference foe Virginia in the semifinals behind Wood's 39 points. Two days later, Indiana beat the Tar Heels for the national championship.

But that only set the stage for a 1982 squad which won it all. Pre-season rated #1, the Tar Heels finished the regular season that way and went on to win the NCAA championship. The squad's 32-2 record equalled the school record for victories in a season as the Tar Heels swept through the ACC Tournament and the East Regional. There were countless heroes on the '82 team. Worthy was co-National Player-of-the-Year and he scored a career-high 28 points in Carolina's 63-62 win over Georgetown in the finals. Sam Perkins was a first team All-America and was joined in the lineup by point guard Jimmy Black, forward Matt Doherty and freshman Michael Jordan. Jordan hit the 17-foot jump shot with 17 seconds left to give the Heels the winning points against the Hoyas.

Mike O'Koren carries Phil Ford off the court of Carmichael Auditorium after Ford netted a career-high 34 points against Duke in his Carmichael farewell in 1978. UNC's 87-83 win gave the Tar Heels the ACC regular-season crown.

Worthy was drafted after his junior year by the Los Angeles Lakers, but the 1983 squad returned a strong nucleus led by Perkins and Jordan, both of whom were first team All-Americas that year with Jordan earning some National Player-of-the-Year recognition. The Heels finished 28-8 after an 0-2 start and were ranked #1 in the nation during several weeks in January and February. After tying for the ACC regular-season title, the Heels made it to the finals of the East Regional before being upset by Georgia. Possibly the highlight of that season was a 16-point comeback victory over Virginia in Carmichael in February in a battle of the nation's two top-ranked teams.

In 1984, Smith had one of his best teams before it fell victim to the injury bug. At 28-3, the Heels became only the sixth team in ACC history to go through the conference round-robin undefeated at 14-0. Jordan was a consensus National Player-of-the-Year and Perkins was All-ACC and first team All-America for the third straight year. Point guard Kenny Smith had his wrist broken in the LSU game and he never fully recovered, hurting Carolina in the post-season.

The 1985 team was another one of Smith's overachieving squads. Ignored in the pre-season Top 20's for the first time in memory, UNC went 27-9 minus Perkins and Jordan and finished tied for first in the ACC regular season. Junior Brad Daugherty and Smith spearheaded that team to the finals of the NCAA Southeast Regional before losing to eventual national champion Villanova.

The 1986 unit, led by first team All-America Daugherty produced another outstanding campaign. The Tar Heels finished 28-6, but were decimated in the post-season by injuries to Steve Hale, Warren Martin and Joe Wolf. For the second straight year, Carolina was ousted from the NCAA Tournament by the eventual national champion, Louisville.

Finally, the 1987 squad proved to be another one of Smith's best. Led by a strong senior nucleus which featured All-ACC players Smith and Wolf, UNC tied the school record for victories in a season with 32 in a 32-4 campaign. For the second time in four years, UNC finished the ACC regular season undefeated at 14-0. Ranked second and third in the final wire service polls, UNC advanced to the NCAA East Regional finals before falling to Syracuse, 79-75. Smith capped a brilliant career as UNC's all-time leader in assists by being named National Player-of-the-Year by Basketball Times.

Carolina players and fans bid adieu to Carmichael Auditorium in January, 1986 with a 90-79 victory over N.C. State in the final game in the grand old edifice. UNC's 21-year record in Carmichael was 169-20.

Carolina's Greatest Players

National Players-of-the-Year, conference Most Valuable Players, All-Americas and Olympians. Scoring champions, defensive standouts, passing wizards and rugged rebounders.

The University of North Carolina has had them all and plenty of them in a basketball history that just might be the most glorious in the land.

A complete list of all the Tar Heel heroes and their exploits would fill up books and, in fact, has done so. But for the purpose of this guide, a briefer history is necessary.

Since 1911, when the sport was first played here, Carolina has won 1,403 basketball games. Only the University of Kentucky, which has played seven more seasons than the Tar Heels, has won more than that. The Wildcat total is 1,426 or just 23 more victories in seven more seasons.

The key link to all this success over the years have been the players. Carolina has always had its fair share of outstanding players.

The Tar Heels' first great success in basketball came in the 1920's. The 1922 team won the Southern Conference championship and the 1923 squad captured the South Atlantic title. Those teams had no regular coaches, but were simply taken to the games by Coaches Bob and Bill Fetzer, experts in almost every sport but basketball.

Norman Shepard was then hired to handle the basketball program in 1924 and promptly led the Tar Heels to a 26-0 record. Carolina won the Southern Conference championship and was declared national champion by the Helms Foundation.

That team featured three truly outstanding players—Cartwright Carmichael, Jack Cobb and Monk McDonald. While the style of play has changed drastically since then, these men are still recognized as three of Carolina's greatest stars ever.

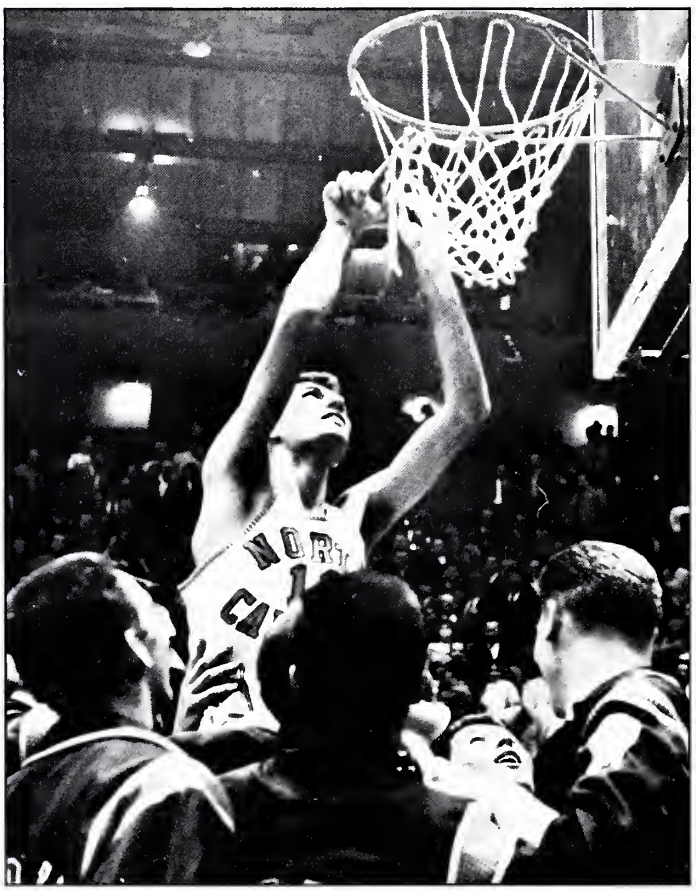
Cobb is a member of the Helms Basketball Hall of Fame. He was a three-time All-America and the Helms National Player-of-the-Year in 1926. At a time when most teams were barely scoring 30 points a game, he averaged 15 as a senior. Carmichael was twice named All-America and McDonald was an all-conference performer.

Although the Tar Heels did not have an All-America like Cobb or Carmichael in the 1930's, there were many outstanding players. Ivan (Jack) Glace, Earl Ruth, Virgil Weathers, Tom Alexander, Jim McCachren and Stewart (Snooks) Aitken made the All-Southern Conference team during that decade.

The big star of the early 1940's was George Glamack—"the Blind Bomber." Glamack had terrible eyesight and could barely see the basket while standing right under it. However, he developed the uncanny sense of knowing where the hoop was in relation to his position on the court. He perfected a hook shot which he shot with either hand and with great accuracy. He was a two-time All-America and Helms Player-of-the-Year in 1941. He's now in the Hall of Fame.

All-America John (Hook) Dillon was the key figure on the 1946 team which lost to Oklahoma A&M and big Bob Kurland in the NCAA finals. Dillon, however, had an excellent supporting cast in Jim Jordan, Bones McKinney, Jim White and Bob Paxton. Jordan, in fact, had been an All-America in 1945 and the Most Valuable Player in the Southern Conference.

Eleven years later, the Tar Heels again reached the national championship



Lennie Rosenbluth was the National Player-of-the-Year in 1957 as Carolina swept to its first national championship.

Known as the Kangaroo Kid in his playing days, Billy Cunningham led the ACC in rebounding three times and in scoring twice.

game. This time they won the NCAA title, defeating Wilt Chamberlain and Kansas, 54-53, in a triple-overtime thriller that rates among the greatest college games ever played.

Lennie Rosenbluth was the star of that team. He averaged a school-record 28.0 points a game and was named National Player-of-the-Year. Other starters on that unforgettable team were Pete Brennan (an All-America the following season), Tommy Kearns, Joe Quigg and Bob Cunningham. It was Quigg who hit two free throws with six seconds on the clock in the third overtime to win the final game in that 32-0 season.

The stars were many during the 1960's. Big Lee Shaffer was the Atlantic Coast Conference Player-of-the-Year in 1960. Shaffer was a great scorer and later was an all-star performer in the National Basketball Association with the Syracuse Nationals.

York Larese and Doug Moe also starred for the Tar Heels in the early part of that decade. Larese ranks as one of the greatest free throw shooters in Carolina history. Moe was a sensational all-around star and now coaches in the NBA.

A teammate of Moe's was Larry Brown, a diminutive guard who rates as one of Carolina's finest playmakers. Brown played on the 1964 U.S. Olympic team won the gold medal.

Billy Cunningham, a three-time All-ACC selection, was the next star on the Carolina scene. He made All-America in 1964 and '65. Only 6-5½, he led the conference in rebounding three times and in scoring twice. The "Kangaroo Kid" went on to have a great professional career with the Philadelphia 76ers and later coached that team.

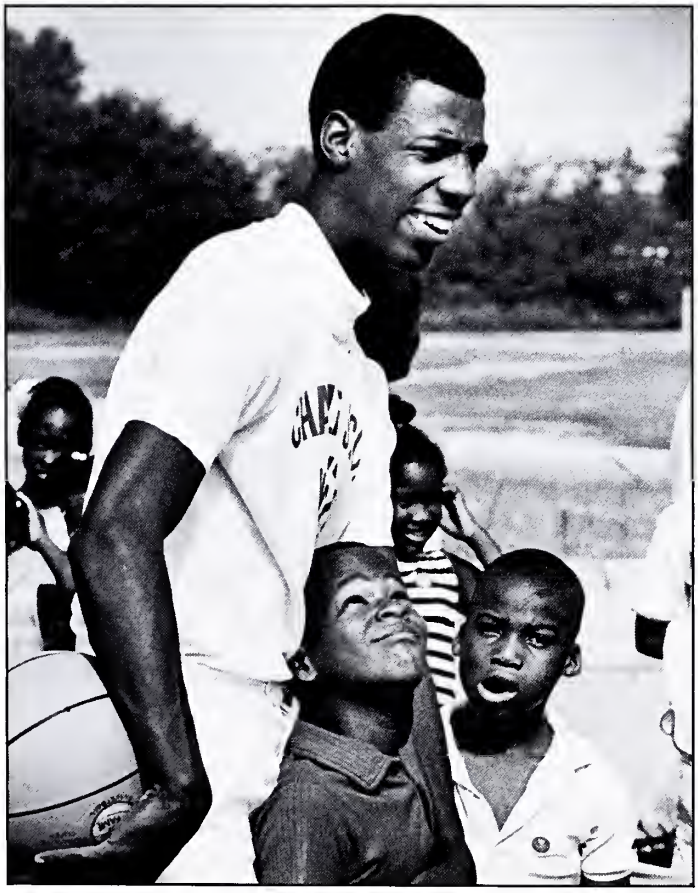
Bobby Lewis, a slender sharpshooter from Washington, D.C., followed Cunningham into the Tar Heel spotlight. He still holds the Carolina single-game scoring record with 49 points against Florida State in 1965.

Next came Larry Miller, an All-America in 1967 and '68. He led his team to the national finals where the Tar Heels lost to Lew Alcindor and UCLA in 1968. Miller twice was named the ACC Player-of-the-Year. At 6-4 and 215 pounds, he was a rugged performer who dazzled crowds with driving layups and a great variety of shots.

Bill Bunting, Rusty Clark and Dick Grubar were starters on Carolina teams which won three straight ACC regular-season and tournament championships, swept three Eastern Regionals in a row and went to the Final Four in 1967, 1968 and 1969.

Bunting had a great senior season and made All-ACC. Grubar was one of the most popular athletes to wear Carolina Blue and was an outstanding playmaker and defender. Clark was a tough defensive player and a great rebounder.

Bobby Jones may well lay claim to being Carolina's best defensive player of all time. He enjoyed a distinguished career with Philadelphia in the NBA.



Charlie Scott was the ACC Athlete-of-the-Year and an Academic All-America for Carolina in 1970.

Larry Miller helped lead Carolina to a pair of Final Fours and was Most Valuable Player in the ACC Tournament twice, a feat accomplished by only one other player.

Then there was Charlie Scott, who excelled in every phase of the game. He made All-America in his junior and senior seasons and was voted ACC Athlete-of-the-Year in 1970. In 1968, he starred for the United States in the Olympic Games.

Three fine frontcourt players—Bill Chamberlain, Dennis Wuycik and Robert McAdoo—sparked Carolina teams in the early 1970's. Chamberlain was the Most Valuable Player in the 1971 National Invitation Tournament as the Tar Heels swept that title. Wuycik was a fine shooter and an aggressive rebounder. McAdoo had a great shooting touch and was an excellent rebounder. They led the Tar Heels to the NCAA's Final Four in 1972.

Another All-ACC performer in that period was George Karl, a three-year starter and a highly popular player. He amazed fans with his daring and diving on the court.

One of the most complete players in the college game was Bobby Jones. Jones had great quickness and was a superb defender. He retired from the NBA two years ago after an outstanding career.

Another great all-around player was Mitch Kupchak, the 1976 ACC Player-of-the-Year. Kupchak led the Tar Heels to a 25-4 record in his senior season and later played a key role in the Washington Bullets' 1978 NBA championship sweep and the Los Angeles Lakers' 1985 NBA title drive.

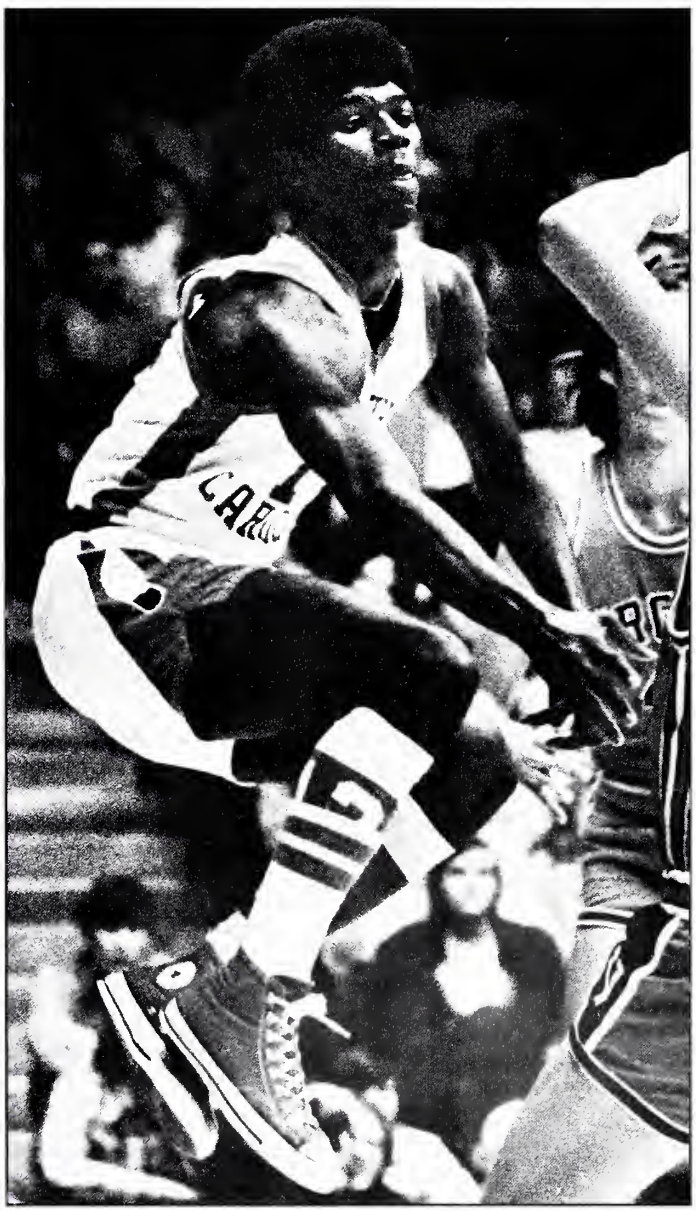
Then came Walter Davis, Tommy LaGarde and John Kuester. They played on Carolina teams which won 98 games and lost only 23. All three were excellent defensive players and good shooters.

Davis, in fact, is regarded as one of the greatest clutch players in Tar Heel history. He's a former NBA Rookie-of-the-Year and an all-pro performer. Kuester was the Most Valuable Player in both the ACC Tournament and the Eastern Regionals as a senior. LaGarde was an All-America whose mid-season knee injury may have cost the Tar Heels the national championship in 1977.

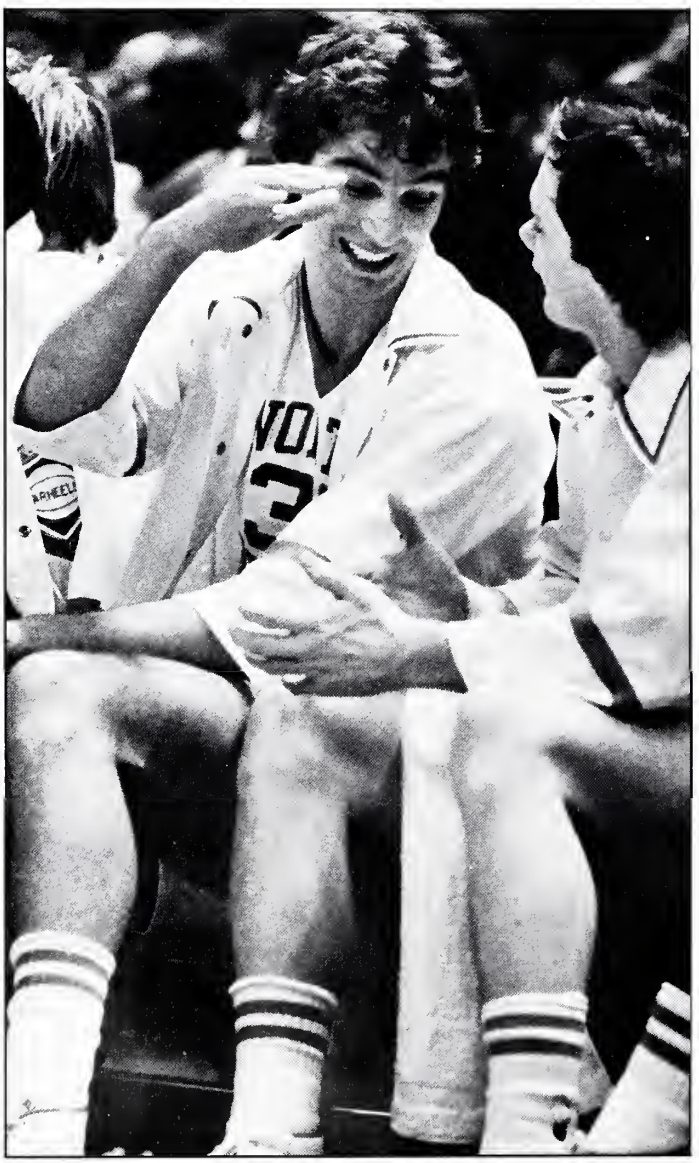
And, of course, there was Phil Ford. He was National Player-of-the-Year in 1978 and is the all-time Carolina leader in scoring and second in assists. He has been called the greatest guard ever to play the college game. Phil also won NBA Rookie-of-the-Year honors.

One of the best defensive players at Carolina, or anywhere else for that matter, was Dudley Bradley. A first-round pro draft choice, Bradley was the MVP of the 1979 ACC Tournament.

The next big stars were a trio of dynamic forwards—Mike O'Koren, Al Wood and James Worthy. O'Koren was the sixth player chosen in the 1980 NBA



Considered by many to be the best college guard of all-time, Phil Ford was the National Player-of-the-Year in 1978.



Mike O'Koren's 31 points in the NCAA semifinals against Nevada-Las Vegas in 1977 helped lead the Tar Heels to the championship game that year. Those 31 points still stand as the Carolina single-game scoring record for a freshman.

James Worthy had a magnificent 1982 season in leading Carolina to the national championship. He was named the MVP of three post-season tournaments that year.

draft after putting together a brilliant Carolina career. He ranks among the school's all-time leaders in scoring, rebounding and assists.

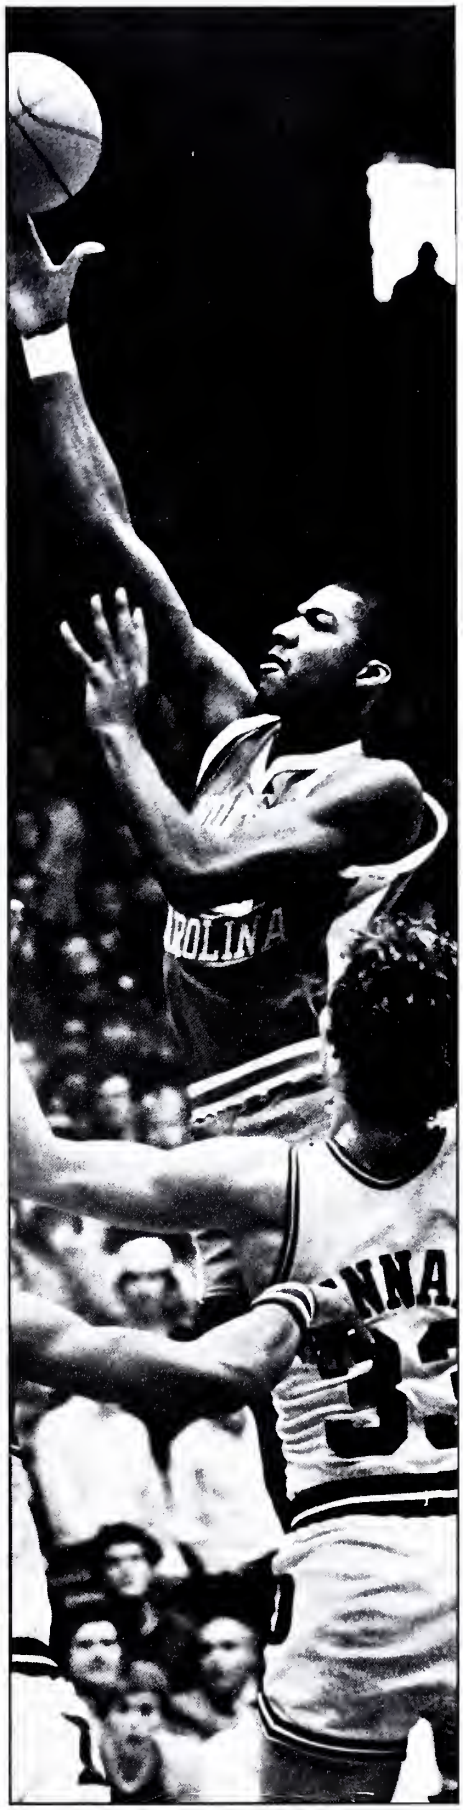
Wood capped a sensational four years by leading the Tar Heels to the 1981 NCAA championship game. He set an NCAA semifinal-round record with 39 points against Virginia in the national semifinals. Always a great shooter, Wood developed into a complete player at Carolina. He was the first senior selected in the NBA draft in 1981.

Worthy was named Co-National Player-of-the-Year with Ralph Sampson in 1982 after leading the Tar Heels to a 32-2 record and the NCAA championship. Worthy saved perhaps the greatest performance of his career for the stretch drive that year, being named MVP in the ACC Tournament, the Eastern Regionals and the Final Four. He had a career-high 28 points against Georgetown in the NCAA Finals and was the first player selected in the 1982 NBA draft by the Los Angeles Lakers.

Another key player on that 1982 team was Jimmy Black. As the senior point guard, Black quarterbacked the Tar Heels through one of the school's greatest seasons. He has the third-highest all-time assist total at the school and ended his career as an outstanding defensive player.

Other starters on that national championship team were Matt Doherty, Sam Perkins and Michael Jordan. Doherty was a perfect role player for the Tar Heels. Whatever needed to be done, he was capable of doing it—whether that meant a big defensive play, an important basket or a perfectly executed pass. He and Davis are two of just three ACC

Sam Perkins is one of only three Tar Heel players to be a first team All-America on three occasions.



Al Wood led the Tar Heels to the NCAA finals in 1981, vanquishing Virginia in the semifinals with an NCAA semifinal-game record 39 points.

players who finished their careers with 1,000 points, 400 rebounds and 400 assists.

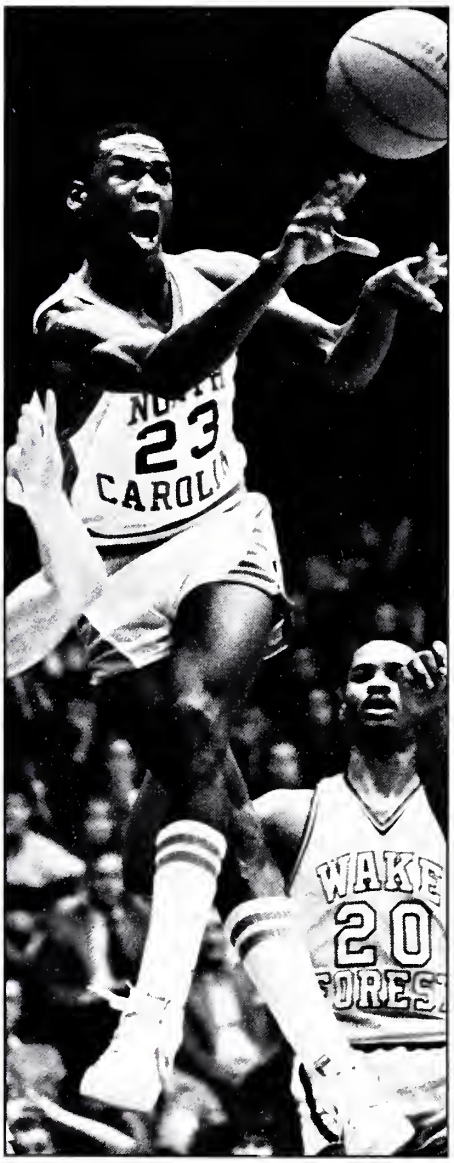
Perkins ranks as Carolina's second-leading all-time scorer and is the top rebounder in school history. A brilliant defensive player, he was one of the biggest stars on the 1984 U.S. Olympic Team in Los Angeles. But, that was to be expected. Perkins always seemed to be at his best in the biggest games. Some of his top performances at Carolina came against opponents with names like Sampson, Tisdale, Olajuwon and Ewing.

Jordan was the unanimous 1984 National Player-of-the-Year after being named the country's top player in 1983 by The Sporting News. A 6-6 guard, Jordan was capable of dominating a game both offensively and defensively. It was his jump shot with 17 seconds to play which gave the Tar Heels the winning points in the 1982 NCAA Finals. He followed that up with more last-minute heroics during his next two seasons, and was the leading scorer on the 1984 U.S. Olympic Team and then won NBA Rookie-of-the-Year honors in 1985, leading the league in total points scored.

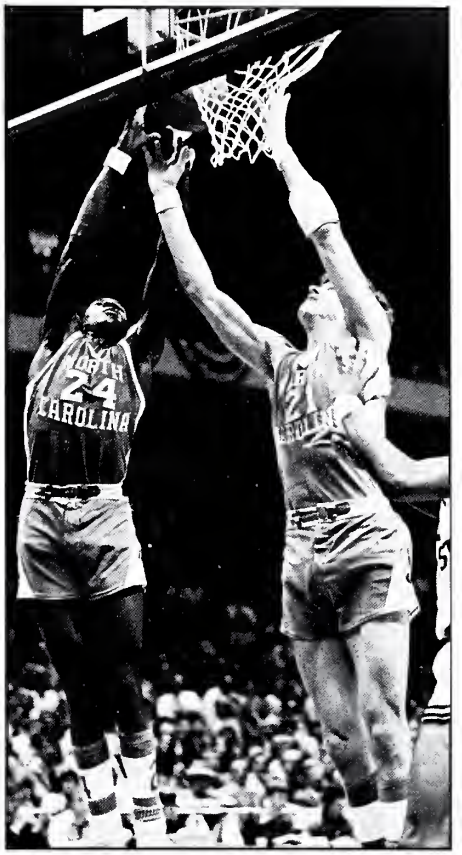
The number one pick in 1986's NBA draft was Brad Daugherty, who had an outstanding four-year career in Chapel Hill. Daugherty left Carolina as the school's fourth-leading all-time rebounder and seventh-leading scorer. A great inside scoring threat, he broke Bobby Jones' career field goal accuracy mark with a percentage of 61.99.

The 1987 Carolina squad tied a school record for victories in a season while going 32-4. The leaders of that squad were a pair of seniors who were both selected in the first round of last summer's NBA draft. Kenny Smith was named National Player-of-the-Year by Basketball Times last year, capping a brilliant Tar Heel career that saw him finish as UNC's career leader in assists. Joe Wolf was the consummate role player—a great shooter and passer and one of Carolina's best defensive players ever.

Smith and Wolf are just the latest in a long line of outstanding athletes who have helped make the Carolina basketball program what it is today—the best in the college game.



Michael Jordan was a unanimous choice as National Player-of-the-Year in 1984 and has gone on to scale new heights as one of the stars of the NBA.



The bedrock of some outstanding teams in the mid-1970's, Walter Davis and Mitch Kupchak led Carolina to a surprise win in the 1975 ACC Tournament. Both went on to enjoy outstanding pro careers.

A duo that played on some of the best Carolina teams ever in the mid-1980's, Brad Daugherty is UNC's all-time field percentage leader and Kenny Smith tops the Tar Heel record book in career assists.

The Facts & Figures About Carolina Basketball

"I said after we lost to Carolina earlier in the season that the winner would not be crowned king and the loser would not be demoralized for life. They say the mark of a champion is taking the other team's best shot and still winning. Carolina's been doing that year after year. They can be on a three-game losing streak, and everyone still wants to beat 'em, because they have North Carolina on their chests."

—Former Duke center Jay Bilas in the WASHINGTON POST, March 3, 1986

Consistency.

It's the mark of true greatness in college basketball.

With the balance in the college game today, it's now possible for practically anyone to be invited to the NCAA Tournament in any given year and it's conceivable that team could get to the Final Four or even win the national championship.

But, the stamp of greatness only goes to those who can have seasons like that over and over again.

That is exactly what the University of North Carolina has done. And the Tar Heels have been at their best in the biggest games—in the NCAA Tournament. Carolina leads the nation in victories in the NCAA tournament over the past seven years with 20 and over the past 11 years with 24.

And, not only has Carolina been successful on the playing floor, but in the classroom as well. In fact, when it comes to both winning basketball games and graduating student-athletes, no one does it better than Carolina.

At a time when college athletics is bombarded by numerous problems, the Tar Heel basketball program could well serve as an example for the way things ought to be done, for the way a major sport can be properly handled in an academic setting, for the way a program can be based on integrity and honesty and still be extremely successful.

And the Tar Heels have certainly been successful, from the day the first ball was tossed up way back in 1911 to the present. Carolina ranks second in all-time collegiate victories to Kentucky, and the record under Coach Dean Smith in the past quarter century has been even more remarkable.

Among the accomplishments:

—Over the past 21 seasons, Carolina has compiled an overall record of 545-128. That's a winning percentage of .810. Carolina has won more games than any other school in the country during that period.

—In the decade of the 1980's, Carolina has a record of 225-48, a winning percentage of .824. The Tar Heels have won more games and have a better winning percentage than any other school in the nation during this decade.

—Carolina is the only school in the country to finish in the Top 10 of both the final Associated Press and United Press International polls in each of the past three seasons. In fact, Carolina has been in the Top 10 of both polls for seven straight years. Furthermore, Carolina has finished in the Top 10 of at least one of the polls in 13 of the last 14 years and in 17 of the past 21 years.

—Carolina has made 21 consecutive trips to a post-season tournament, including 13 successive trips to the NCAA Tournament. Those 13 straight appearances are the longest current streak in the country and it equals UCLA's skein of 13 straight NCAA invitations as the longest in the history of the sport.

—Carolina is the only school in the country to have made it to the Final 16 of the NCAA Tournament each of the past seven years. The second-highest number of trips to the Sweet 16 in the same time is four by eight different schools. Carolina has played in the Sweet 16 of the NCAA Tournament 13 times in the past 21 seasons.

—Coach Dean Smith's teams have now won at least 20 games for 17 successive seasons. That's the longest streak of any coach in college basketball history. Smith also now has coached 15 teams which won at least 25 games, another all-time high. In fact, Carolina has won at least 27 games under Smith each of the past seven years.

—With nine appearances, Carolina ranks second only to UCLA (13) in NCAA Final Four appearances.

—The balance in the Atlantic Coast Conference has been so great in the past five seasons every team save Carolina has had at least one losing season in league play. The Tar Heels' worst record in that span was 9-5 in 1985. That was still good enough to tie for the regular-season championship that year.

—Carolina has not finished lower than third in the ACC for 23 straight seasons, including a period of 19 straight when the Tar Heels never finished lower than second. No team in any conference ever had such a streak of consistency.

—28 Carolina players have earned first team All-America honors.

—On nine occasions, the Tar Heels have produced the National Player-of-the-Year in college basketball.

—And maybe the most amazing statistic of all, 158 of Coach Smith's 164 lettermen in his 26 years in Chapel Hill have earned their college degrees, a percentage of .963.

Perhaps Carolina's most amazing feats have come in the ACC, the league generally regarded as the toughest and best balanced in college basketball. As Jay Bilas pointed out in 1986, the Tar Heels have all but dominated the conference over the last 21 years.

Case in point. When Carolina went

14-0 in ACC regular-season play last year, it marked the second time in four years the Tar Heels have gone unbeaten in league competition. It was also only the seventh time that has happened in ACC history and Dean Smith is the only coach ever to have two teams go undefeated in ACC play.

Over the last six years, Carolina has a record of 71-13 in ACC play. Second best mark in the league during that period is 48-36 by Virginia.

Carolina has finished first in the ACC race 19 times. That's 11 more times than any other school in the league. The Tar Heels have also won 10 ACC Tournament championships, again the most in league history.

ACC teams have now made 18 trips to the Final Four. Carolina has accounted for eight of those.

These accomplishments have kept the Tar Heels in their customary role as everybody's biggest rival, which in turn makes what Carolina has done even more stunning.

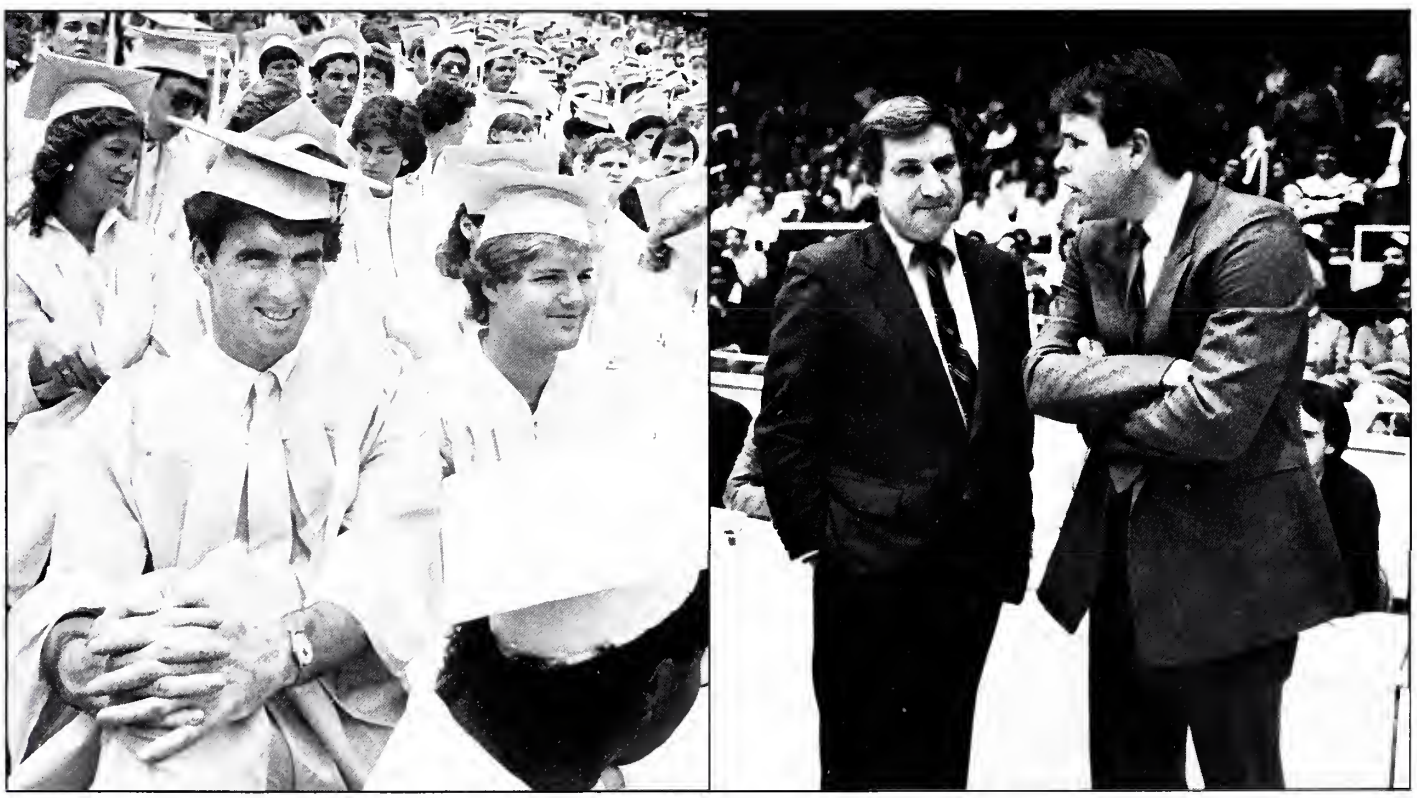
"Carolina is always there. State had its run, but Carolina was right there. Maryland did the same thing. Duke, Virginia, Tech—they all had their moments, but Carolina was always there. They've been great every year. They cast a shadow over the league," said Duke All-America guard Johnny Dawkins in 1986. His statement rings hauntingly true for ACC foes of the Tar Heels.

Over the past 21 seasons, Coach Smith has led his team to first place in the ACC standings 14 times, including 10 outright titles and four ties. That's a remarkable record of consistency.

Carolina's presence has also been felt on the national level, where it is one of the most respected names in all of college basketball.

While Kentucky enters the 1987-88 season with 23 more victories than Carolina on the all-time winning list, the Wildcats have also played the game for seven more seasons. Kentucky and Carolina also have the best winning percentages in college history.

Carolina is one of only six schools



Much of the tradition of the Carolina basketball program has nothing to do with the Tar Heels' on-court success. An amazing 158 of the 164 lettermen who have played under Coach Dean Smith since 1961 have earned their degrees from Carolina, including Matt Doherty in 1984. These alumni have gone on to great success in their chosen fields, which include law, medicine, business and education. Some have even followed in Smith's footsteps and become coaches, like John Kuester, Class of '77, currently the head basketball coach at George Washington University.

to have won an NCAA championship and the National Invitational Tournament title. The Tar Heels won NCAA crowns in 1957 and 1982 and swept through the NIT in 1971. Carolina was also voted national champion in 1924 with a 26-0 record.

Since the NCAA Tournament was first played in 1939, Carolina has been one of its most dominating teams. It's nine trips to the Final Four is indication of that. So are the 43 NCAA Tournament victories.

In fact, Carolina's play in the NCAA Tournament has been exemplary. Carolina's 43 tournament victories are the third most in history and Coach Smith trails only UCLA's John Wooden in NCAA Tournament triumphs.

The Tar Heels have won eight NCAA regional titles, including seven eastern championships. No one else has won more than three eastern crowns. Carolina's regional titles came in 1957, 1967, 1968, 1969, 1972, 1977, 1981 and 1982.

The streak of 13 consecutive trips to the NCAA Tournament would be even longer except that for many years only one team from each conference was allowed to compete in the national field. It was during that time that the Tar Heels made NIT trips in 1970, 1971, 1973 and 1974.

No freshman class since 1963 has missed a post-season tournament at Carolina and only four have failed to go the Final Four.

Although the Class of 1987 was one of those four teams to miss a Final Four trip, what it accomplished elsewhere is quite noteworthy. In four seasons, that group played on teams with records of 115-22, a winning percentage of .839. The Tar Heels were 47-9 in ACC regular-season play in that period.

The 1987 senior-led squad also equalled the winningest season in school history with 32 victories and it established school scoring records with 3,285 points and a 91.3 scoring average.

Carolina has finished in the top 10 of at least one wire service poll 17 times in the last 21 years. That's the most of any school in the country in that period. Nine times in that stretch the Tar Heels were ranked as one of the top four teams in that nation.

Although the Tar Heels have gained a lot of notoriety for the four corners offense they have used late in some games, they actually rank as one of the nation's highest-scoring teams in recent years. Carolina runs one of the best fast breaks in college basketball and has averaged over 80 points a game since 1967.

However, the key to Carolina's success may be its changing man-to-man defenses. The Tar Heels mix their innovative and gambling scramble defense with their more conservative pressure man-to-man. Well, that's conservative for the Tar Heels. Those who have played against it certainly would not call it that.

In fact, Carolina's defense is so effective it actually helps the offense. Steals and easy layups have accounted for many Tar Heels points over the years. That's one of the reasons Carolina has the best shooting percentage in the country over the last 21 seasons. Carolina has hit at least 51 percent of its shots from the floor for an incredible 17 consecutive years. That includes an ACC record 55.9 in 1986.

The Tar Heel shooting percentage has also been helped over the years by the unselfish nature of the Carolina players in selecting only the best shots to take.

Many people refer to basketball as "a tournament sport" and the Tar Heels have excelled in tournament play. Carolina, in fact, has now won 56 tournament championships. The Tar Heels have competed in such events as the Holiday Festival in New York City, the Rainbow Classic in Honolulu, the Sugar Bowl Classic in New Orleans, the Great Alaskan Shootout in Anchorage and the Far West Classic in Portland.

Carolina has had at least one player on each of the last six U.S. Olympic basketball teams—Larry Brown in 1964; Charlie Scott in 1968; Bobby Jones in 1972; Mitch Kupchak, Tommy LaGarde, Walter Davis and Phil Ford in 1976; Al Wood in 1980; and Sam Perkins and Michael Jordan in 1984.

There have been dozens of All-Americas at Carolina. Eighteen of them have played in the Dean Smith Era alone—Billy Cunningham, Bob Lewis, Larry Miller, Charlie Scott, Dennis Wuycik, Bill Chamberlain, Robert McAdoo, Bobby Jones, Mitch Kupchak, Tommy LaGarde, Phil Ford, Mike O'Koren, Al Wood, James Worthy, Sam Perkins, Michael Jordan, Brad Daugherty and Kenny Smith.

In the last 11 years, Carolina players have been named consensus first team All-Americas eight times. No other school has had that many first team selections in that period.

When Kenny Smith was named National Player-of-the-Year by Basketball Times last year, it marked the ninth time a Tar Heel player has been so honored. Earlier in this decade, James Worthy won the honor in 1982 and Michael Jordan in both 1983 and '84. Other Tar Heels who have been chosen the best player in the country were Jack Cobb in 1926, George Glamack in 1940 and '41, Lennie Rosenbluth in 1957 and Ford in 1978.

In 1986, Carolina moved into the new 21,444-seat Smith Center to play its games. The construction of that building was needed because it was impossible to handle ticket demands in 10,000-seat Carmichael Auditorium. The new arena, already being called the best in college baksetball, allows over twice as many students to get into games. Members of the Educational Foundation, who contributed large amounts of money to the University for several years but still could not get a seat in Carmichael, now have an opportunity to watch the Tar Heels play. The new building cost $34 million and was constructed solely through private donations.

Most regular-season Tar Heel games are televised. Six Carolina games will be televised nationally this year by either CBS or NBC with many others being broadcast across the country by ESPN.

Carolina has produced numerous professional basketball players, including 33 since Smith became head coach. That group includes men who have been rookie-of-the-year, player-of-the-year and all-pro.

However, Smith's graduates also include 14 attorneys, 11 doctors, 25 coaches/teachers and numerous others who have become successes in the business world.

Perhaps Villanova Coach Rollie Massimino summed up the Carolina basketball program as succinctly as possible during the 1985 NCAA Southeast Regionals in Birmingham, Ala.

"North Carolina has a great team and a great tradition," he said. "North Carolina is what college basketball is all about, academically and athletically."

These facts and figures are an indication why.

Tar Heels In International Competition

From Moscow to Mexico City, from London to Tokyo, University of North Carolina basketball players have traveled to the four corners of the globe over the past two decades showcasing their talents and, in many instances, leading the United States to unforgettable wins on the international level.

Indeed, Tar Heel stars, household names in American sports circles, have entertained millions of fans worldwide with their sparkling brand of play.

It has practically become a summertime tradition.

Carolina players seem to adjust with relative ease to the international game, where the rules are slightly different and the play more physical. The playmaking wizardry of a Charlie Scott, for example, or the eye-opening dunks of a Michael Jordan, were just as amazing to Brazilians and Spaniards as they were to Atlantic Coast Conference rivals.

The most recent forays by Tar Heel players into the international game came this past summer when Jeff Lebo played on the U.S. team which won the silver medal in the Pan American Games at Indianapolis and when Scott Williams earned a berth on the U.S. squad which played in the Junior World Cup in Italy.

Just the summer before, in 1986, Kenny Smith, Carolina's dynamic point guard, played a key role as the Americans tasted victory at the World Championships in Madrid, Spain.

Smith was the Americans' second-leading scorer for the tournament and he had a game-high 23 points against the Soviet star Arvidas Sabonis with 15 seconds to play which proved to be the winning basket in an 87-85 victory.

However, it has been in the Olympic Games, the world's most prestigious athletic gathering, where Carolina's basketball program has received the most international attention.

In fact, the last six U.S. Olympic teams have included at least one Tar Heel each. Beginning with Larry Brown, who played on the 1964 gold medal-winning team in Tokyo, a total of 10 Carolina players have been honored as Olympians. Even coach Dean Smith and his assistant Bill Guthridge have been involved, guiding the 1976 U.S. squad to the gold medal in Montreal. That championship team included four Tar Heels—Mitch Kupchak, Walter Davis, Tommy LaGarde and Phil Ford. Smith has remained an important figure in international play, serving on numerous Olympic-related committees. Those have included selection committees for both players and coaches for various international events.

Jordan strung together two incredible weeks at the 1984 Summer Games held in Los Angeles. A two-time National Player-of-the-Year, he led the U.S. in scoring (17.1 ppg)—and in rave reviews.

Jordan, of course, wasn't the only Tar Heel to win critical acclaim in Los Angeles. Sam Perkins may not have been as spectacular as Jordan, but his play was nontheless brilliant and his consistency unmatched.

Before the Games began, Jordan and Perkins were named U.S. co-captains. Their accomplishments in leading the U.S. to an eight-game sweep of the gold medal proved them more than worthy of that honor.

Despite the high scoring average, it was Jordan's mid-air magic that so often left opponents standing flat-footed, staring at him in disbelief.

His long jumpers and acrobatic moves thrilled the fans, delighted the news media and awed opposing coaches.

"Today he showed me nothing incredible," Spanish coach Antonio Diaz-Miguel said after his team fell to the U.S. "He is always the same. He comes in there like an airplane. I don't know how he remains in the air when everybody else is going down. He is elastic."

Jordan's own teammates and coaches, though, were probably more impressed than anyone.

"I'm not sure anyone who watches the Olympics will be able to appreciate Jordan as much as our coaches and players do in practice," said George Raveling, a U.S. assistant coach at the '84 Games. "One day, here in L.A., he made a move to the basket that just stunned the players. (Patrick) Ewing looked at (Wayman) Tisdale and just shook his head. He couldn't believe it."

Jordan was at his best in the first of two U.S. games versus Spain. He scored 24 points, sinking his last nine shots from the floor to finish 12 of 14. His steal and 35-foot jumper at the halftime buzzer gave the Americans a 46-41 lead. The U.S. blitzed the Spaniards in the second half to win, 101-68.

Perkins scored more than eight points a game and was America's third-leading rebounder during the Los Angeles fortnight. His inside defense was also outstanding.

Perhaps no one appreciated Perkins' talents more than U.S. head coach Bobby Knight, who repeatedly praised the three-time All-America. "Give me players like Sam Perkins," Knight said, "and I'll coach forever."

To no one's surprise, Jordan and Perkins were the American heroes in the gold medal game. Facing Spain for the second time, the U.S. romped, 96-65. Jordan scored 20 points on nine of 15 shooting, while Perkins had 12 points and seven rebounds.

Carolina's tradition of Olympic excellence, of course, had begun 20 years earlier with backcourt star Larry Brown. Charlie Scott represented the Tar Heels in 1968, when the U.S. swept to the title in Mexico City, and Bobby Jones was a member of the 1972 team, which settled for the silver medal amidst great controversy in Munich.

As a result of that disputed loss to the Soviet Union, there was tremendous pressure on the U.S. to recapture the gold medal in the 1976 Games. The Americans desperately needed the title to reestablish this nation's international basketball superiority and, in the meantime, to gain a little revenge against the Soviets.

This task fell upon the shoulders of Coach Smith and his top aide at Carolina, Bill Guthridge. The four Tar Heels featured on the roster each played key roles in leading the Americans to a six-game sweep of the coveted Gold.

With Coach Smith stressing aggressive defense and an unselfish offense, the U.S. routed Italy in the opening game. The Americans next encountered a fired-up Puerto Rican team, but managed to avoid an upset thanks to Ford's clutch free-throw shooting in the final moments. The U.S. rolled into the finals by beating Yugoslavia, Czechoslovakia and Canada. However, a much-anticipated rematch with the Soviets was not to be. The USSR had been ousted by the Yugoslavian team in the semifinals. In the championship, the U.S. defeated the Yugoslavs to reclaim the gold medal.

Because of the Olympic boycott, the U.S. did not compete in the 1980 Games in Moscow. Still, Carolina's Al Wood starred on the American squad which compiled a 5-1 record against professional teams in a series of exhibition games held across the country.

But Olympic achievements alone do not fully explain why Carolina has had such a strong impact on international basketball. There have been plenty of other outstanding performances.

The Tar Heels have been represented in the last five Pan American Games. Robert McAdoo played on the 1972 U.S. team, while while Tommy LaGarde starred for the 1975 squad. Mike O'Koren co-captained the 1979 team that won the gold medal in Puerto Rico.

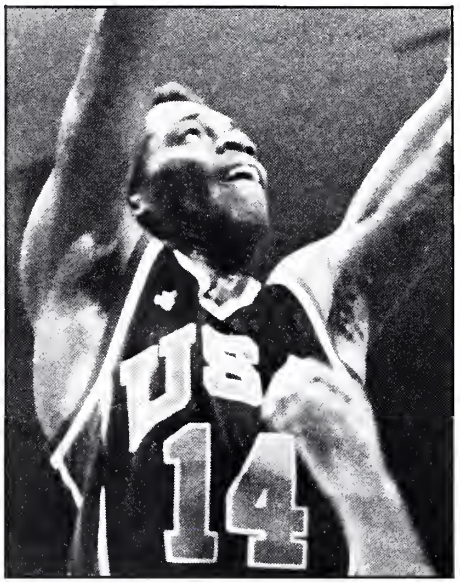
Perkins and Jordan teamed up in 1983, leading the U.S. to the title in Caracas, Venezuela. Perkins was regarded as the most consistent American player in that tournament. Jordan keyed a couple of comeback victories with the last-second heroics that Tar Heel fans became so accustomed to during his three years in Chapel Hill. Lebo made it five Pan Ams in row for Carolina players with his selection last summer.

One year before his Pan American appearance, O'Koren was the starting forward for the U.S. in Gregarian Cup competition in Moscow. LaGarde journeyed into the Soviet Union as well as a member of the U.S. Continental Cup team in 1975. That team also played games in Greece, Yugoslavia and other areas of Europe.

Dennis Wuycik played on the U.S. pre-Olympic team which toured Europe in 1971. In the summer of 1973, a Soviet national team came to America to meet a U.S. all-star team. Carolina's George Karl and Bobby Jones both played instrumental roles in that series. Later that summer, Karl became one of the first Americans in decades to visit Mainland China. He was on a U.S. team which played there and, again, he was outstanding.

Three Tar Heels have won gold medals at the World University Games—Billy Cunningham at Budapest in 1965, Larry Miller at Tokyo in 1967 and Kupchak at Moscow in 1973.

The summer after he helped Carolina win the 1982 NCAA championship, Jordan toured Europe on a U.S. all-star team. In 1983, Matt Doherty played on the U.S. Select Team in Southeast Asia. During that same summer, Steve Hale played in Europe in 1983 with a team sponsored by Athletes in Action.



Sam Perkins was a key element in the 1984 U.S. Olympic team's drive to gold in Los Angeles.

Two Tar Heels, Brad Daugherty in 1984, and Joe Wolf in 1985, have represented the U.S. in the William Jones Cup Tournament in Taiwan. Both played on American teams which went 9-0 and won the championship there.

Carolina's success across the seas, though, is more than a collection of fine individual efforts. On four occasions, the entire Tar Heel team has ventured to Europe for tournament competition.

In 1971, Carolina visited Madrid, Spain, for the International Christmas Tournament. In claiming the championship, the Tar Heels swept past Brazil, Spain and Real Madrid, the European champion. The game against Real Madrid was televised across Europe, and Carolina responded with a brilliant all-around performance.

Smith took his team back to Madrid for the same tournament in 1974, but this time the Tar Heels were not as fortunate, falling to a veteran Real Madrid club in the championship. Carolina did spring a major surprise, however, defeating the powerful Cuban National Team on a remarkable half-court shot at the buzzer by Walter Davis.

London was the destination in 1979, as the Tar Heels entered their third international Christmas tournament of the decade. The Tar Heels will make a return trip to London this December. Prior to the 1984 season, Carolina visited Greece and won four games against teams from Italy and the host nation. A Perkins steal that led to a last-second shot by Jordan clinched one win. Perkins, Jordan and Buzz Peterson were selected to the all-tournament team.

Many Carolina players have gone on to successful pro basketball careers in Europe. Doug Moe accomplished the most, three times earning European Player-of-the-Year accolades. Other Tar Heels who have played professionally in Europe include Dave Chadwick, Kim Huband, Craig Corson, Donn Johnston, John O'Donnell, Donald Washington, Ed Stahl, Bill Chambers, Bruce Buckley, Tom Zaliagiris, Geff Crompton, Randy Wiel, Jeff Wolf, Rich Yonakor, Pete Budko, Tommy LaGarde, John Virgil, Chris Brust, Jeb Barlow, Steve Hale, Warren Martin, Robert McAdoo and Dave Popson.

It seems that Carolina's outstanding basketball tradition, so well-documented in the U.S., has virtually become a global affair.

Carolina & The Final Four

By Mike Sobb, Sports Information Intern

As the NCAA basketball tournament prepares for its 50th anniversary this coming spring, one school stands out in the course of time as being a consistent part of the history of the event, the University of North Carolina. Tar Heel fans have had the pleasure of seeing 21 Carolina teams travel across the nation to various tourney sites to be a part of college basketball history.

Nine of those Tar Heel teams have reached the national semifinals with six having played in the chapionship game. The 1946 team reached the finals at Madison Square Garden in New York City before losing to Henry Iba's Oklahoma A&M team, 43-40. That tournament was held before the advent of the regional championships and the present-day Final Four concept.

Since the Final Four became a part of college athletic life in 1952, eight North Carolina teams have won spots in the coveted event with two capturing the national championship. Here's a tribute to each of those teams.

1957: Three's (Overtimes) a Charm as UNC takes NCAA Title: Carolina rolled through the season with relative ease as the Tar Heels compiled a perfect 32-0 record in winning North Carolina's first NCAA championship. Coach Frank McGuire's team was not to be denied its spot in the Final Four as UNC rolled over Syracuse 67-58 in the regional final for a chance to travel to Kansas City, Mo. One of the finest matchups in the history of the tournament followed as Carolina topped Michigan State, 74-70, in three overtimes in the tourney semifinals. Pete Brennan kept UNC's hopes alive with three seconds remaining in the second OT as his jumper sent the game into a third extra period. National Player-of-the-Year Lennie Rosenbluth showed why he led the NCAA tourney in scoring as he knocked home 31 points to send UNC to the finals. Once there, Carolina met Wilt Chamberlain and Kansas, but UNC was not to be denied. The Tar Heels were to go three overtimes again, and when center Joe Quigg hit two free throws with six seconds to play in the third extra period, Carolina had clinched its first NCAA championship, 54-53. Rosenbluth led UNC with 20 points, although he fouled out with two minutes to play in regulation.

1967: Smith Leads Carolina to his First Final Four: The Tar Heels would have to wait 10 years, but North Carolina returned to the Final Four—this time under sixth-year head coach Dean Smith. The Tar Heels rolled to a 26-6 record and into the NCAA Tournament as UNC advanced to the national semifinal in Louisville, Ky. A rough contest followed for the Tar Heels as UNC could not outlast Dayton, with the Flyers winning 76-62. Carolina took fourth in the country that season.

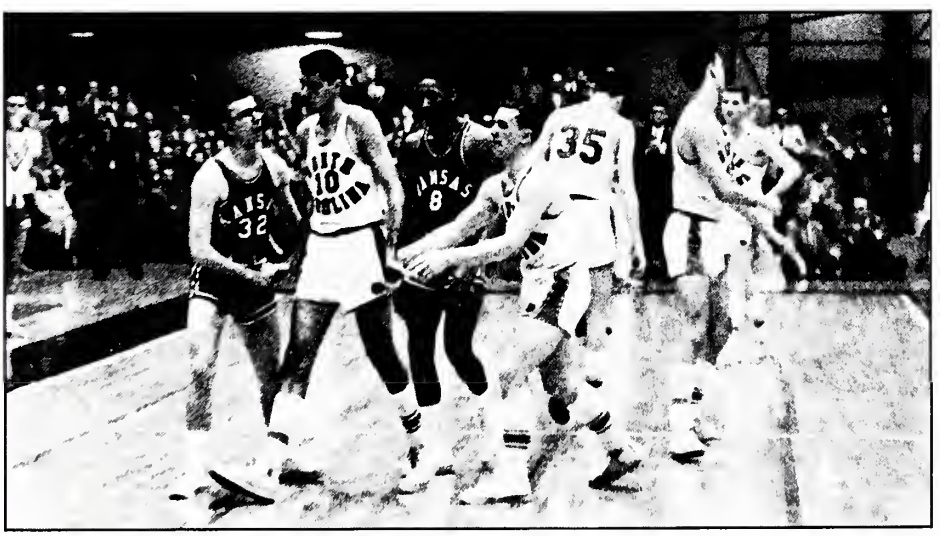
1968: North Carolina Makes it Two in a Row: Smith's Tar Heels put together a fine 28-4 season in '68 and the Final Four would be a stop for the second year in a row. Big Ten power Ohio State took on Carolina in Los Angeles and Smith's crew made sure it was going to the NCAA final this season as the Heels cruised by the Buckeyes, 80-66. UNC used a balanced scoring attack as All-America Larry Miller led Carolina with 20 points. UCLA's dynasty was already into full swing, however, and the Bruins downed UNC, 78-55, in the NCAA final.

The NCAA celebrates the 50th anniversary of its basketball tournament in 1987-88.

1969: Tar Heels Play in Third Straight Final Four: Carolina compiled a 27-5 record and made its third straight Final Four appearance. This was an almost unheard of accomplishment at the time because this was before conferences got more than one team in the tournament and before the tournament was seeded. Carolina thus won three straight regular-season Atlantic Coast Conference titles, but then had to win three consecutive ACC Tournaments just to get into the NCAA event. Sparking this remarkable three-year sweep was a senior class of Rusty Clark, Bill Bunting, Dick Grubar, Joe Brown and Gerald Tuttle. Grubar suffered a season-ending knee injury in the ACC Tournament, but the Tar Heels still reached the Final Four when Charlie Scott hit a jumper at the buzzer to defeat Davidson in the East Regional final. Purdue, however, proved too much for Carolina in the national semifinals as the Tar Heels missed a return championship showdown with UCLA.

1972: Olympic Year Finds Tar Heels Back in Final Four: Carolina returned to the Final Four in Los Angeles, finishing with a 26-5 record. This was a well-balanced Carolina team, featuring guards Steve Previs and George Karl and front-court players Bill Chamberlain, Bobby Jones, Robert McAdoo and Dennis Wuycik. Another matchup with UCLA seemed a possiblity, but the Tar Heels were upset by Florida State in the semifinals, 79-75. Carolina came back to topple Louisville, 105-91, in the consolation game.

1977: Carolina Rolls to Atlanta for Appearance Number Six: Walter Davis, Mike O'Koren, Phil Ford—they are all names that meant success at North Carolina and that's exactly what they wrought in '77. Carolina rolled up a 28-5 mark and moved through the NCAA Tourney to a sixth Final Four appearance. The Tar Heels were battered and bruised for the tourney. Tommy LaGarde went down in midseason with a knee injury that required surgery, while Davis broke a finger in the ACC tourney semifinals and Ford hyperextended his elbow in a regional semifinal game with Notre Dame. The road to Atlanta was not an easy one as UNC had to survive close contests with Purdue, Notre Dame and Kentucky to get there. The Tar Heels burned the nets like Sherman did Atlanta as UNC rallied in the second half for an 84-83 victory over Nevada-Las Vegas in the semifinal. O'Koren netted 31 points, still a UNC freshman record, to lead UNC. Guard John Kuester was clutch as he hit five of six free throws down the stretch to ensure the UNC win. Carolina's hopes for the NCAA title ended against Marquette as the Warriors went on to victory 67-59 in the finals.



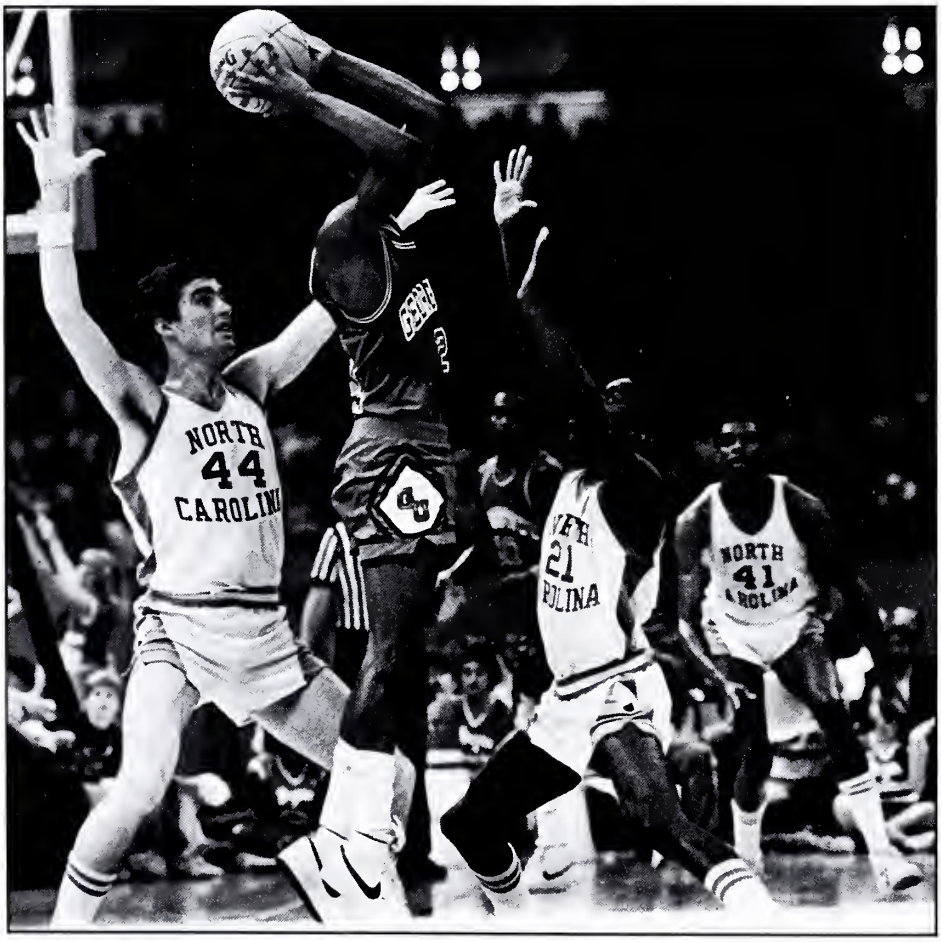
Lennie Rosenbluth fouls out late in regulation time of the 1957 NCAA finals in Kansas City, Mo. He is congratulated for his stellar play in the game by teammate Tommy Kearns and Kansas players Bob Billings (#32) and Maurice King (#8).

Sam Perkins hooks for two of his 25 points in Carolina's 68-63 NCAA semifinal win over Houston in 1982.

1981: The City of Brotherly Love Welcomes UNC Back to Final Four: Smith & Company embarked on another Final Four pilgrimage and this time Philadelphia would be the resting point. Al Wood broke a 22-year-old semifinal-game scoring record as he connected from all over the floor for 39 points as UNC downed conference rival Virginia, 78-65, the first time two ACC foes met in the Final Four. Wood scored 13 consecutive points in one stretch in the second half and hit nine of 10 shots from the floor during the final 20 minutes. He also led both teams with 10 rebounds from his small forward spot. The combination of James Worthy and Sam Perkins held Ralph Sampson to only 11 points. Perkins hit for 11 points, while pulling down nine rebounds. Carolina would face Indiana for the title, on a day when President Ronald Reagan had been shot and there was some doubt as to whether the game would even be played. Wood was again superb as he netted 18 points. Carolina led most of the first half before James Worthy picked up his third foul. UNC efforts were not enough as the Hoosiers won 63-50.

1982: Jordan's Jumper Gives Carolina NCAA Crown: Freshman Michael Jordan was expected to help the Tar Heels when he came to Chapel Hill, but few could have predicted that he would be the one to hit "The Shot Heard 'Round The (College Basketball) World." Carolina cruised to an impressive 32-2 record and Smith's seventh trip to the Final Four, this time in New Orleans, after surviving a second round scare from James Madison, 52-50. Carolina would have to meet another big man in the semifinals as UNC played Houston complete with Akeem Olajuwan. UNC rolled to a 68-63 victory and a spot in the NCAA final. Sam Perkins scored 25 points and yanked down 10 rebounds to lead Carolina to the finale, while holding Olajuwan to two points and no rebounds.

In one of the best NCAA championship games in the history of the event, Carolina and Georgetown played back-and-forth basketball with UNC's biggest lead at three points and the Hoyas; at six. Georgetown climbed on top 62-61 with 57 seconds remaining as Sleepy Floyd hit a nine-foot jumper in the lane. The Tar Heels used a timeout and worked the ball around, eventually to Jordan who drilled a 16-footer that found nothing but the bottom of the net with 15 seconds to play, and UNC led 63-62 before a record crowd. A last gasp attempt by Georgetown went astray when Freddie Brown threw the ball to championship MVP James Worthy, and Carolina would move back to the pinnacle of college basketball for the first time in 25 years. Worthy netted a career-high 28 points in his final game as a Tar Heel.



Forward Matt Doherty and point guard Jimmy Black play some tough trapping defense on Georgetown's Eric Floyd in the 1982 NCAA championship game at the Superdome.

The University of North Carolina

The nation's first state university to accept and graduate students, the University of North Carolina was chartered in 1789 and opened its doors on January 15, 1795.

Since its beginning almost 200 years ago, Carolina has become nationally known for its achievements in teaching, research and public service. Its 14 colleges and schools with their more than 70 departments, related centers and institutes make the University the most comprehensive institution in the state. It also is one of the few universities in the nation with five health schools on one campus.

From one building, 100 students and two professors during its first year, the University has grown to 162 major buildings, 22,000 students and more than 1,900 full-time faculty members teaching in over 100 fields. Its living alumni total more than 150,000, some 50 percent of whom have been graduated in the last 15 years.

In 1985, the quality education offered by the University received further recognition. Richard Moll, author of "The Public Ivys: A Guide to America's Best Colleges and Universities," picked UNC as one of eight public universities in the nation equivalent to a traditional Ivy League school. He also called Chapel Hill "the perfect college town."

Education writers at The New York Times also have praised the University, including it on the list of 221 schools they call "The Best Buys in College Education." Carolina also made the Times' "1984-85 Guide to Selective Colleges," placing in the top six percent of the 275 colleges rated.

Similarly, a 1987 survey published by U.S. News and World Report ranked the University among the top 11 institutions in the nation for the high quality of its undergraduate program.

Those honors give further credence to a comprehensive evaluation published recently by the National Academy Press. In it, Carolina was ranked as one of the nation's best graduate and research institutions. The faculty was rated the best in the Southeast and one of the nation's finest. Other studies have rated schools and departments among the best, and the University library was rated first in the Southeast and 17th in the nation.

Such lofty standing also is reflected in the honors received by faculty members and students. Members of the faculty have won major awards and held top positions in virtually every discipline in which Carolina has a program. Fifty-four Guggenheim fellowships have been awarded since 1951, and numerous Fulbrights and other awards are received each year. The Pulitzer Prize has been awarded to University faculty members, alumni and to books published by the UNC Press, one of the nation's best academic presses. Many UNC students have been named Rhodes Scholars, and the Morehead Scholarship Program, patterned after the Rhodes and considered the best of its kind, annually brings about 65 outstanding freshmen to Chapel Hill.

The Old Well

The need for both quality long-range developmental planning and the best facilities also has been recognized. Buildings recently completed have included the Kenan Center of North Carolina, the Dean E. Smith Center, the Hanes Art Center, the Morehead Chemistry Laboratories, the Carmichael Residence Hall and Sitterson Hall, the new computer science building. Construction continues on the Public Health and Environmental Sciences Center.

The flagship institution of the 16-campus University of North Carolina system, the University at Chapel Hill ranks among the nation's great institutions.

And as it approaches its bicentennial year, the University aims to advance its tradition of excellence in service to the state and the nation, says Chancellor Christopher C. Fordham, III.

"In very few states can the most promising students truly reach for the stars at their own state-owned university," Fordham says. "That the people have made these outstanding academic resources available—at modest cost—is part of the genius of the University of North Carolina."

The Dean E. Smith Center

The Dean E. Smith Center

By Deana Nail, Smith Center Marketing & Public Relations Assistant

As you stand at midcourt in the middle of the Carolina Blue state map—almost where Chapel Hill would be—you're surrounded by a sea of seats, all cushioned and upholstered in that familiar blue. The first wave of seats, about 9,000 on the lower level, crests only to lead you to an upper level where the blue seems to rise for miles, reaching up to the 20-plus ACC championship and NCAA participation banners. As the sun streams through a 13,000-square-foot fiberglass dome, you see and feel the tradition of excellence that permeates the Dean E. Smith Center.

This tradition of execellence is not only a feeling; it's reality. Since playing its first game on the Smith Center court, a January 18, 1986, 95-92 win over Duke, the University of North Carolina has gone 19-1 at home heading into the 1987-88 campaign.

Since moving from the hallowed halls of Carmichael Auditorium a season and a half ago, Carolina has outscored opponents at home 1,824 to 1,448, a margin of almost 400 points. The Tar Heels have scored more than 100 points three times with the 122 points tallied against Miami (Fla.) on December 6, 1986, being the most points scored in Smith Center. The largest margin of victory in the 21,444-seat arena is 53 points, a 118-65 shellacking of East Tennessee State last February.

But the building is much more than statistics on numerous Carolina wins. Smith Center is a $33.8-million, 300,000-square-foot arena built with private contributions to pay tribute to a nationally-acclaimed basketball program and the man who has guided it since 1961, Dean Edwards Smith.

In 1980, the University, its athletic department and the Educational Foundation, UNC's athletic fund-raising organization, embarked on the greatest fund-raising campaign in the history of intercollegiate athletics. Six years later, 2,362 people had donated anything from $1 to $1 million each, and as a result, Smith Center and Koury Natatorium, one of the nation's finest and fastest swimming facilities, stood on a 7½-acre tract behind Hinton James Dormitory on Carolina's south campus.

Construction actually began August 1, 1982, when the first of 20,000 cubic yards of rock were removed to make room for Smith Center's foundation. Workers then poured more than 18,500 cubic yards of concrete into the massive hole and began the meticulous process of building the great octagon-shaped structure. Once completed, Smith Center stood 340 feet by 380 feet and contained 1,800 tons of structural steel.

Despite its great size, Smith Center is a gentle giant nestled comfortably among thousands of trees and plants. The center's tan color allows it to blend with the natural landscape, thus preserving the beauty of the wooded area.

Smith Center's interior matches, or perhaps exceeds, its majestic exterior. On the center's second level, wooden parquet floors lead to the athletic administration, basketball, sports information and ticket offices and the University's memorabilia room, a 3,000-square-foot mini-museum that contains artifacts and highlight tapes of some of the greatest moments in Carolina's rich athletic history.

The first level contains the finest in locker room and training facilities. Along with a basketball team locker room and lounge, there are six recreational and two swimming team locker rooms. The first level also houses a state-of-the-art training room and a weight room complete with Nautilus, Universal and free weights.

A hallway connects the first level with

Koury Natatorium, home to a 50-meter, eight-lane Olympic-sized swimming pool. Site of USOF-'87 swimming and water polo competition and the 1987 men's and women's Atlantic Coast Conference championships, this world-class facility also houses the Educational Foundation offices and the Skipper Bowles Room, a 7,000-square-foot room used for pre-game and post-game receptions and other functions.

But, the main attraction of the Smith Center complex is the arena itself. A 1,200-foot-long, 22-foot-wide concourse, naturally lighted through tinted glass, winds around the arena to provide easy access to both upper and lower seating areas.

Besides the 9,000 seats in the lower level, there are approximately 12,500 upper level seats, all of which are chair seats that face midcourt and are located no more than 150 feet from the arena floor.

The basketball floor is just one of many technological advancements found inside Smith Center. This Spring-Aire floor, one of only two in the nation, is a permanent maple floor installed on hundreds of arched metal springs. The springs are placed every 16 inches in one direction and every three feet in the other. Layers of wood—a 4x4 wooden beam, a one-inch layer of plywood and then maple planks—are placed on top of the springs.

This intricate network of springs and wood gives the floor a resilience that helps reduce ankle and knee injuries. When sufficient weight is exerted on the playing surface, the floor gives up to one-eighth of an inch, thus reducing stress on the ankles and knees.

Other technologically advanced features include scoreboards, a state-of-the-art sound system and computer-controlled lighting. Along with four scoreboards, Smith Center features two 29-foot-long electronic message centers that flash words and pictures in various colors. Another space-age feature, the center's 350,000-watt sound system has one main cluster, 14 satellite clusters and 146 small speakers mounted beneath the lip of the upper deck to eliminate any dead spots that may occur where the upper and lower levels overlap. This personal speaker system enhances sound at basketball games and the many Smith Center concerts, which have featured such top entertainers as Lionel Richie, Billy Joel, Neil Diamond and James Taylor.

A first-rate concert facility, Smith Center is also without question one of the nation's finest sports arenas. Site of USOF-'87 basketball and gymnastics competition and the first and second rounds of the 1988 NCAA East Regionals, it has been called a basketball palace by some.

Others are more elaborate in their praise. After visiting Smith Center during USOF-'87, Ralph Routon, executive sports editor of the Colorado Springs Gazette Telegraph, wrote, "Being in this business takes one to all kinds of special places in sport: Notre Dame, West Point, Annapolis, stadiums and arenas charmed by history or tradition, halls of fame and great golf courses.

"Most of those meccas induce major goose bumps and even watery eyes on occasion. But, none of that hallowed ground fully prepared this enthusiast to cope with what he has seen for the first time at the 1987 Olympic Festival.

"I'm talking about the Dean Smith Center at the University of North Carolina.

"People here call it the Dean Dome. That's not reverent enough for the combined Taj Mahal, Buckingham Palace and Vatican of college basketball, all under the same huge roof with the white fiberglass crown.

"The place is unbelievable. Massive. Overwhelming. Opulent.

"Simply stated, it's the ultimate."

Terrier Outlook

Bolstered by the return of three starters and a host of key reserves, Boston University appears capable of making another run at the ECAC North Atlantic crown and an automatic NCAA Tournament bid in 1987-88. For three consecutive seasons, the Terriers have advanced to the league's championship game only to fall short on each occasion. The 1986-87 cagers won 10 of their last 14 contests to finish 18-12 overall and 12-6 in the league, good for third place. All-star candidate Drederick Irving, a team co-captain who is threatening BU's all-time scoring mark, is the key to the Terriers' success. He averaged a team best 18.8 points per game a year ago.

Bulldog Outlook

The Citadel was hit heavily by graduation but does return seven lettermen and three starters for Randy Nesbit's third year as head coach. The Bulldogs were 13-15 overall last year and finished fifth in the competitive Southern Conference race. Gone are a pair of career 1,000-point scorers for the Bulldogs, Craig Burgess and Craig Bardo. The starting backcourt does return for Nesbit, however, with guards Ed Conroy and Leon Bryant carrying the load. Bryant is the team's top returning scorer, having hit for 10.0 points per game last season. The Bulldogs also return senior forward Kent Hill, who averaged 9.3 points per game in 1986-87, and was second on the squad with a 6.5 rebound average.

Tiger Outlook

Although losing several key players from last year's team, the most successful squad in Clemson basketball history, coach Cliff Ellis does return a pair of starters as the Tigers prepare for the 1987-88 campaign. Ellis led his troops to a second-place ACC finish last year and a 13th-place standing in the final Associated Press poll. Gone from that team are ACC Player-of-the-Year Horace Grant, forward Anthony Jenkins and guard Michael Tait. Ellis will build his 1987-88 squad around the talents of forward Jerry Pryor and an outstanding point guard in Grayson Marshall. Sophomore center Elden Campbell is also counted on for big things for the Tigers this season.

Blue Devil Outlook

The Blue Devils return all but two players from last year's team which went 24-9 and reached the final 16 of the NCAA Tournament. Gone are a pair of NBA draft choices, Tommy Amaker and Marty Nessley. Amaker will be particularly hard to replace as he started every game for four years and was the key player in the development of Duke's man-to-man defense. But head coach Mike Krzyzewski has high expectations for this year's Duke team. Headlining the list of returning players is pre-season All-America Danny Ferry, who led the Blue Devils in scoring, rebounding and assists last year. The junior was also the top free throw shooter in the Atlantic Coast Conference. Other returnees include senior co-captain Billy King, junior John Smith and sophomores Robert Brickey, Alaa Abdelnaby and George Burgin.

Yellow Jacket Outlook

Playing the nation's toughest schedule a year ago, coach Bobby Cremins' team lost seven games last season by a total of 12 points. Those seven games made the difference between a would-be 23-win campaign and Tech's final 16-13 mark. The Yellow Jackets return three starters and five other lettermen off last year's team and look to be improved in 1987-88. Two of the returning starters are double-figures scorers, forwards Duane Ferrell and Tom Hammonds, both of whom are past ACC Rookies-of-the-Year. The Rambling Wreck all returns two guards with starting experience in Brian Oliver and Craig Neal.

Fighting Illini Outlook

Headed by the return of three starters and a host of solid reserves, Illinois looks for another competitive year in the Big Ten. Gone are key players such as Ken Norman, who led the Big Ten in rebounding last season, Doug Altenberger and Tony Wysinger. The Fighting Illini will have to combat those losses with consistent play from the likes of Lowell Hamilton, who provided the offensive punch inside last year. The 1986-87 squad finished with a solid 23-8 record overall and was 13-5 in the always rugged Big Ten. That was good enough for a fourth-place finish in the conference and a UPI and AP poll final ranking of 11th. Illinois will count on aggressive inside rebounding from center Jens Kujawa and leadership from senior Glynn Blackwell to produce another competitive campaign in the Big Ten.

Counting seven new recruits and three players who sat out last season, USC has 10 new names on its 1987-88 roster. Eight Trojans are back from last year's 9-19 team (4-14 for 10th place in the Pac-10), giving head coach George Raveling 18 players to compete for playing time. Raveling will have to contend with the loss of forward Derrick Dowell (20.9 points, 8.8 rebounds a game last year), one of the best basketball players ever at USC. Among the eight returnees are three 1987 starters—6-6 senior Brad Winslow (10.7, 2.3), Troy's second leading scorer last season, 6-9 Bob Erbst and junior point guard Rich Grande, the leading assist man in '86-'87.

Six lettermen, including two full-time starters and three others who alternated at a third starting spot, return from last year's team. That quintet will be joined by five newcomers and a pair of red-shirted lettermen from the 1985-86 team to form the nucleus of this year's Pony squad. Guard Kato Armstrong and forward Carlton McKinney, SMU's top two scorers from last season, lead the group of returning players. Armstrong was named second team All-Conference last year after finishing as the leading scorer in SWC action with a 20.0 average in the 16 regular-season league games.

Last year, the Bruins compiled a record of 25-7, their best since 1978-79, and captured their first Pac-10 title since 1982-83. This year's team returns three starters and a total of 10 lettermen from last year's team which won the first-ever Goodyear/Pac-10 Post-Season Tournament and recorded UCLA's first win in the NCAA Tournament since 1980. Leading the way will be junior Jerome "Pooh" Richardson, a bonafide All-America candidate. Last year, Richardson led the Bruins in assists and was second on the team in scoring, rebounding and steals.

Cavaliers Outlook

This year's Cavaliers will try to overcome the loss of Tom Sheehey and Andrew Kennedy to graduation. Kennedy was Virginia's leading scorer and rebounder a year ago with 16.5 points per game and 7.5 rebounds per game, while Sheehey averaged 11.6 points and 6.2 rebounds. Virginia's returning starters are guards John Johnson and Richard Morgan. Johnson, a 5-11 senior, averaged 12 points a game last season and led the team in assists with 194. Morgan, a 6-3 junior, led the team in steals with 46 and averaged 12.3 points per game. Also returning for Virginia are sophomores Bill Batts, Mark Cooke, Jeff Daniel and Rob Metcalf along with seniors John Dyslin and Darrick Sims and junior Tim Martin.

Demon Deacon Outlook

The 1987-88 Wake Forest basketball team will unquestionably be one of the youngest in the nation. Ten of 11 scholarship players are either freshmen or sophomores. There are no seniors on this year's roster. The Deacons must replace three key seniors from last year's squad, including Tyrone "Muggsy" Bogues, the ACC's all-time assist leader and a first-round draft pick of the Washington Bullets. Sophomore Sam Ivy will be counted on to provide leadership and scoring punch for this young team. Backcourt performer Cal Boyd will be the only member of the team with more than one season of varsity experience.

The Educational Foundation

John Cherry

Neal Harrell

Ernie Williamson

One of the most important organizations in the Carolina Athletic Department is the University's Educational Foundation, Inc.

It is the Educational Foundation which makes possible all athletic scholarships awarded by Carolina.

These scholarships, either partial or full, are awarded to nearly 400 student-athletes for the 1987-88 academic year, with an additional 100 awarded for summer school. The scholarship budget, which has more than doubled in the last six years, totals $2.25 million this year, with $800,000 allocated to women's scholarships.

"Since its founding in 1938, the Educational Foundation has provided scholarships, either partial or full, to over 5000 student-athletes," says Moyer Smith, the Foundation's Executive Vice-President.

The purpose of the Foundation is to offer financial aid to worthy young men and women seeking an education at the University and to support University programs by providing services and funds for the construction of facilities or purchase of equipment.

The following are categories of annual giving:

Super Ram ($1,200) - Entitles a member to purchase up to eight season football tickets (selected location) and receive an assigned parking space. Football seating and parking will be in a preferred area.

Big Ram ($500) - Entitles a member to purchase four season football tickets (selected location) and receive an assigned parking space. Football seating and parking will be in a preferred area.

Ram ($300) - Entitles a member to purchase two season football tickets (selected location). Additional tickets may be purchased, but location of tickets is subject to the point system.

Little Ram ($150) - Entitles a member to purchase four season football tickets. However, location of tickets is subject to the point system each year.

Educational Foundation Member ($50) - Those who give less than $150 receive periodic bulletins and the option to purchase tickets. The minimum Foundation membership is $50 per year. However, contributions of any amount are welcome.

Carolina was one of the first schools in the nation to set up an endowment program for athletics. This program was started in 1968 and has already surpassed the $12,000,000 mark.

The endowment program consists of $50,000 endowed scholarships—set up through insurance, life memberships, wills and bequests and a pooled income program.

The Foundation operates on a dignified and realistic plane in compliance with all of the regulations of the National Collegiate Athletic Association and the Atlantic Coast Conference.

"We couldn't have the type program we do without the Educational Foundation," says Athletic Director John Swofford. "We've enlarged our staff in the last several years and I think the staff additions we have made will enable us to do a better job for our members."

The Foundation offices are located at the Smith Center in the North end of the Koury Natatorium. This new office complex has helped tremendously in allowing the Foundation staff to better serve the membership.

Moyer Smith

Moyer Smith is in his first year as executive vice-president of the Educational Foundation.

Smith was appointed to the position in December, 1986, replacing Ernie Williamson. Williamson, who had held the job since 1957, is now heading the Foundation's endowment program.

A native of Lexington, N.C., Smith has been connected with Carolina throughout a good portion of his athletic career. He played halfback on Tar Heel football teams from 1958 to 1960.

Following graduation in 1961, he coached for six years in high schools in Winston-Salem, Albemarle and Lexington. He then returned to Chapel Hill to serve as an assistant on Bill Dooley's football staff for six seasons. He was head coach of the Tar Heel freshmen for three years, posting a 14-1 record and winning three straight Big Four championships.

He left Carolina in 1973 to join the coaching staff at Florida State, but returned the following year to become assistant athletic director for business. He was named associate athletic director two years later.

Before taking over Williamson's position, Smith served on the foundation staff for nine years. He worked first as field secretary and then as vice-president for membership services.

Smith is married to the former Jane Webster of Lexington. They have two sons, Moyer, Jr. and Brent.
